MERCY SHIPS STILL HELD UP

GERMAN PRISONERS AT NEWHAVEN

DISCUSSIONS between the British and German Governments concerning the exchange of wounded men continue. The latest news, says the Press Association, indicates that to-night is the earliest time at which the scheme can come into operation.

The two mercy ships provided for the transport of the prisoners of war were to have sailed with the Germans from Newhaven on Friday night, but because of Germany's new demands their departure was postponed.

On Saturday the British Government informed the German Government that unless agreement was reached by Sunday morning the wounded men would be disembarked. Since the men still remain aboard, it is felt that the German reply is of a nature to permit the period to be extended.

In London yesterday there was a long conference between the Foreign Office, the War Office and Admiralty officials, and while this was going on the wounded Germans walked up and down a covered platform at Newhaven.

GERMAN WOMEN INCLUDED

When the first hitch in the scheme occurred the British Government at once fell in with a proposal that a number of German women internees from the Isle of Man should be repatriated, together with the wounded. On Saturday the women arrived in London from the Isle of Man—43 of them, and a small boy. They were taken to various centres in London, and will remain there until final agreement on the scheme of repatriation has been reached.

Although keenly disappointed at the prolonged delay, the wounded Germans aboard the Dinard last night maintained a good-humoured patience. In their quarters below decks they played cards and chatted.

Portholes on Dinard's starboard side were screened to prevent the Germans from gazing across the harbour, and the hospital train which had brought them to Newhaven blocked their view on the other side. During the morning all but the cot cases were exercised in parties for about an hour. They looked surprisingly well. The fitter ones were non-combatant personnel.

The Germans are kept informed of the progress of negotiations by M. la Haccius, a Swiss, who is the International Red Cross delegate in Britain.

There is a German padre among the party.

CIGARETTES

The Red Cross, who have placed 16,000 cigarettes aboard the ships for the use of the British wounded, discovered that there were only six boxes of matches on board. Three gross of boxes were supplied.

DIED FROM WOUNDS IN BELFAST

MAN KIDNAPPED A WEEK AGO

A MYSTERIOUS shooting affair occurred in Cyprus street in the Falls road area of Belfast on Saturday, as the result of which a young man named Thomas McAlister lost his life.

At about 11 p.m. the sound of firing drew a small crowd to Cyprus street, and McAlister was found lying on the road. He was taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where he died on Sunday afternoon.

Two men were seen running away from the scene of the shooting, and the police immediately initiated a search in the neighbourhood, but up to yesterday evening no arrests had been made.

McAlister, who lived in White street, Belfast, was kidnapped about a week ago, and his whereabouts were unknown to his friends until he was found in Cyprus street.

At the hospital it was found that he had sustained two bullet wounds in the groin, and had been battered about the head apparently with the butt-end of a revolver.

BUDYENNY HITS BACK IN UKRAINE

Heavy Fighting in Crimea "Gateway"

WHILE the Russians state that Marshal Budyenny, Commander of the Soviet Southern Armies, is making strong attacks against fierce Panzer thrusts towards the industrial heart of the Ukraine and on the narrow "gateway" to the Crimea Peninsula, the German High Command announces "fighting for a strongly defended Soviet position" in the area of Perekop.

No news is yet forthcoming of the drive by Russian troops along the coast of the Sea of Azov to the north-east with the object of relieving the Crimea defenders and cutting off the Germans in the Perekop Isthmus.

London comment last night was that with the opening of the sixteenth week of the war the Germans enjoyed no major salients, and, at the moment, no Red forces are in danger of encirclement. The gravest source of danger at present is in the Ukraine, where the Germans have reached Poltava, south-east of the tank city of Kharkov, and Novomoskovsk.

While from Berlin, Budapest and Bucharest comes the news that Budyenny's blows have been repulsed, a correspondent of "Pravda" reports counter-attacks by the Russians and the re-taking of thirty populated places within three days, thus making much easier the position in one sector of the Ukraine operations.

Despatches received in Moscow last night said, according to Associated Press, that in a pitched battle for Leningrad the Red Army pushed back the Germans two and a half to three miles from the city at some points. In the Ukraine Budyenny's units were said to have advanced as much as 21 miles.

TIMOSHENKO'S ADVANCE

Fresh successes on the central front, where units in Marshal Timoshenko's command have at some points advanced over 12 miles and captured important positions, and in the approaches to Leningrad, where in one sector Von Leeb's troops have been pushed back two or three miles, were reported in despatches reaching Moscow yesterday, says Reuter.

The advances in the central sector were carried out by Soviet troops commanded by Eremenko, and, after the occupation "of several dozen inhabited points," they are still pressing the Germans.

On the Leningrad front, a Soviet army commanded by Major-General Konkov, advanced after engaging the Germans in intense fighting during the first three days of this month. The enemy has been cleared from an important inhabited area, says Red Star.

RIVER CROSSED

Konkov's success followed strenuous fighting during September, in which his troops forced a passage of the River "V" and firmly established themselves on the left bank.

Describing Eremenko's advance, Moscow Radio says the Red Army men assumed the offensive simultaneously at various points after testing the Germans' weak spots and wearing down their forces by vigorous defence operations. The Germans attempted to bar their way with tank forces, supported by aircraft and heavy artillery, trench mortar and machine-gun fire, but the Luftwaffe 'planes, however, were "paralysed" by a Soviet unit commanded by Polynin, which also routed the tanks and smashed up five of them.

The German News Agency claims that in hard fighting near Leningrad German troops yesterday took "a stubbornly defended locality" and captured 30 machine-guns and 30 grenade-throwers. Soviet attempts to "break through the German ring" are also claimed to have been successfully repulsed.

The Agency also says that "important industrial targets in Leningrad" were shelled on Friday.

RUSSIAN ATTACKS IN UKRAINE

A Reuter telegram from Moscow yesterday says:—Details suggesting that the situation is easing in a certain sector of the south-western front are given by a Pravda correspondent to-day. Soviet troops in this sector have delivered a series of successful counter-blows. Units under the command of Kharitonov have retaken from the Germans and the Rumanians 30 populated districts in the space of three days.

In the frontal region—and in this war the front is now stabilised in a straight line—the situation is now much better, the correspondent adds. The movement of refugees has ceased and traffic on the roads and elsewhere is now all directed towards the actual fighting front. The long, straggling, inhabited district of "B," into which the Rumanians had advanced, has now been cleaned up.

DIVISIONAL STAFF DESTROYED

The Rumanian Divisional Staff was either killed or captured and all their material seized. Mopping up of the outskirts of the district is now going on.

In another region a bridge was successfully held against a Hungarian regiment, of which two companies were wiped out. In a third area Soviet troops advanced 20 miles in 36 hours. The Germans are now trying to slow up the Russian counter-attacks by means of mass air raids, but the Soviets continue to make progress.

Claims that Soviet counter-attacks have been repulsed north of the Sea of Azov are made in an official Bucharest communiqué, quoted by the German News Agency. Chasseurs, Alpins and a cavalry corps, co-operating with German troops, are said to have repulsed enemy attacks after "bloody fighting."

Soviet attacks in the Sea of Azov area are also said to have been defeated, although the Russians were "far superior in the number of units employed and the calibre of their artillery."

"The enemy is in full retreat on the east of this sector," the communiqué added.

"Over 500 prisoners and the destruction of thirteen Russian tanks, including one 52-ton tank, are claimed, and the Soviet armoured train was "immobilised."

3,000,000 GERMAN CASUALTIES

MOSCOW RADIO REPORT

Germany has lost over 3,000,000 men killed, wounded or taken prisoner since she invaded the Soviet Union, according to the Director of the Soviet Information Bureau, M. Scherbakov, quoted by Moscow radio.

In the same period the Soviet losses in killed, wounded and missing were 1,128,000 men, he says.

M. Scherbakov adds that the Germans have lost 11,000 tanks, 13,000 guns and 9,000 aircraft shot down in air combat or destroyed on aerodromes.

"STUBBORN FIGHTING," SAYS MOSCOW

The midnight Soviet communiqué reported stubborn fighting along the entire front.

The communiqué estimated that on Friday the Russians destroyed 41 enemy 'planes for the loss of 18 Red Air Force machines.

Two German 'planes were destroyed at the approaches to Moscow to-day, the communiqué added.—Associated Press.

2,000 KILLED, RUSSIANS SAY

The 125rd German division and the 89th Regiment were routed with the loss of 2,000 dead after a seven-day battle, according to an Izvestia correspondent quoted by Moscow radio.

Soviet troops, after forcing the Germans to abandon a fortified height and three villages, occupied the principal defence positions. In fierce battles, which continued for two days and nights, the Germans were caught in a pincers movement and annihilated. The Red Army occupied nine villages in the last two days of the offensive, and are continuing the pursuit of the enemy.

POSSIBLE NEW GERMAN PUSH

A great new German offensive—as suggested by Herr Hitler in his broadcast—"is most likely on the southern sector, where the Germans have massed great forces, and the weakened Soviet Armies cannot be easily reinforced," says a Turkish Radio Journal, quoted by Ankara Radio.

EXPLOSIONS SHAKE KENT COAST

Heavy reverberations shaking the Kentish coast early this morning suggested that R.A.F. bombers were attacking enemy targets at or near Boulogne. So violent were some of the explosions that the ground on the cliffs overlooking the Channel trembled and windows rattled.

LORD HALIFAX ON INVASION

HEAVIER RAIDS ON GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Sunday. — Lord Halifax, British Ambassador in Washington, on his arrival from Britain told the Press yesterday that invasion of the Continent had been thoroughly explored by military and technical experts, and he believed that a force would be landed somewhere when the time was ripe. He would not hazard a suggestion as to where and when, but said that at present both shipping and equipment were insufficient to make the project feasible.

Stressing the importance of producing heavy bombers, he said that one delivered this year was worth two or three delivered next year. Only by an overwhelming attack from the air could conditions be created in Germany which would enable the war to be brought to a speedy end, and the steady bombardment of Germany was also the best method of relieving the strain on the Russians and draining German fighter 'planes for the Russian front. He described Herr Hitler's speech as a desperate attempt to whip up German moral for the coming winter.—(Reuter.)

SEVEN CZECHS EXECUTED

LONDON, Sunday. — An official communiqué issued in Sofia confirmed the news of a Greek revolt, reported on Friday, in the Drama region of Eastern Macedonia, when a party, armed with machine-guns and hand-grenades, attempted to seize public buildings in a number of villages. According to a Bulgarian spokesman, 19 Bulgarian policemen and other officials were killed in the fighting which ensued.

On charges of "preparation for treason, economic sabotage, and the unlawful possession of weapons," seven Czechs were executed in Prague yesterday. They included Dr. Otakar Klapka, former Mayor of Prague.

Further executions reported to-day are those of four Dutchmen, announced (according to Moscow radio) by the German Military Command in Holland. The sentences were for "sabotage, spying, and attempts to blow up German-controlled railway lines."—(Reuter.)

U.S. MAY ARM MERCHANTMEN

VIEWS OF PARTY LEADERS

PRESIDENT ROOSEVENT and Mr. Myron Taylor, his personal Envoy to the Pope, had a conversation over the telephone yesterday. They will confer at the White House to-morrow.

It is believed in New York, says Reuter's Correspondent, that President Roosevelt wanted to consult with Mr. Taylor, who has only just returned from visits to the Vatican City and London, on his two audiences with the Pope and the animated controversy about religious freedom in Russia. Upon his return, Mr. Taylor said that he had information of the "utmost value" for the President and Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State.

President Roosevelt is also meeting, on Tuesday, the Republican and Democratic leaders of the Senate, in orders to thrash out the question of modifying the Neutrality Law.—(Reuter.)

WASHINGTON, Sunday.—The majority of the leading members of the Senate are expected to urge President Roosevelt this week to take advantage of what they regard as growing support for his freedom of the seas policy, and seek almost complete nullification of the Neutrality Act.

One influential legislator said there was no doubt that three of them would advise Roosevelt to recommend the immediate removal of the Act's major restrictions on shipping. Senator Connally, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; the Democratic leader, Senator Alben Barkley, and Senator Austin, assistant leader of the Republicans, have said they favoured the arming of American merchantmen and sending them into the war zone.

DIVERGENT VIEWS

The minority leader, Senator McNary, was said to oppose any major changes at present, and Senator George, former Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, to support the arming of ships, but not sending them to war zones. Mr. Sol Bloom, Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives, favours removal of both restrictions.

Parliamentary strategists agreed that the sinking of the American-owned tanker, I.C. White, apparently strengthened the argument for changes in the Neutrality Act without delay. President Roosevelt was represented as reluctant to seek more than authority to arm merchantmen at present. Even his staunchest supporters believed that an effort to send American ships with supplies to England would provoke a major controversy. One said that the possibility of a Senate filibuster—a body formed to obstruct action by time-wasting—was not to be discounted.—(The Associated Press.)

ACT OF PIRACY

Mr. Cordell Hull denounced the sinking of the tanker as "another act of piracy," and said that every nation had an inherent right of self-defence in meeting attacks which are part of an attempted conquest of the earth. America's aid to Britain policy was affected every time a submarine sent a sent a ship carrying American supplies to the bottom. "If we say that we can do nothing because some vessels which are torpedoed are under neutral flags, our aid to Britain would drop to a minimum," he said. Regardless of what flag the I. C. White was flying, or whether it was in convoy, abstractions of international law must be construed and dealt with in the light of self-defence.

When the aggressor nations are moving against some new area for the purpose of conquest, it is part of their plan to seize control of the high seas and then deny the rights of any country to defend itself, he said. If that can be done, he added, no nation can defend itself.

Only three men are missing from the crew of the I.C. White, according to a radio message received by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey from the tanker's skipper.

MORE 'PLANES

An announcement by the Office of Production Management states that 1,914 aircraft were delivered in September, compared with 1,854 in August. September's figure is a new record, and brings the total of aircraft delivered during the first nine months of this year to 12,651.

BOMBING ACTIVITY IN MIDDLE EAST

ATTACK ON ITALIAN MUNITION FACTORY

A FEATURE of the Royal Air Force Middle East activity on Friday last was the bombing of Marina di Catanzaro, an important railway junction in the toe of Italy. According to the Air Ministry News Service, the bombers blew up a number of factories, and caused havoc among the warehouses and at the power station.

"The important railway junction, power station and munition factory at Marina d' Catanzaro were successfully attacked on Friday, October 3, by bombers of the Royal Air Force," said Sunday's Royal Air Force Middle East communiqué.

"The raid was made from a low level, and hits were obtained on all the objectives causing considerable damage. A stationary supply train in the junction was also machine-gunned.

"Bardia harbour and military objectives nearby were subjected to a heavy attack during the night of October 3-4 and the following day. A South African squadron participated in these effective raids, and also carried out an attack on an enemy camp near Sollum.

"Numerous reconnaissance flights and protective fighter patrols have been made, but few engagements resulted, and none was of a decisive character.

"From all operations one of our aircraft is missing."

The British report from Cairo yesterday announced "no change in the situation" in Libya.

ITALIAN REPORTS

ROME, Sunday.—To-day's Italian communiqué says:—

"In Northern and Eastern Africa there were engagements of a local character, favourable for our troops.

"The Italian Air Force carried out intense bombing of the quays and harbour installations of Tobruk and of barracks and installations in the zone of Mersa Matruh."

"Fires and explosions broke out.

During the raid on Benghazi two enemy aircraft were brought down in flames. A third was brought down by German fighter aircraft.

"Our Air Force successfully bombed air bases in Malta. Other aircraft successfully raided the air fields of Nicosia and Larnaca, in Cyprus, and sank enemy ships in the port of Paphos."—(Reuter.)

MORE MEN FOR DEFENCE

MR. AIKEN'S CALL AT MILLSTREET

The young men in the Army and local forces had, said Mr. Frank Aiken, Minister for the Co-Ordination of Defensive Measures, speaking at Millstreet yesterday, disproved the common saying that the people of this country were brilliant at conceiving ideas, but hopeless in carrying them out when patience and perseverance were required. They had shown tenacity in training and proved their willingness and capacity for the humdrum work as well as the spectacular work, which might be necessary for the defence of the country.

They had survived the first two years of this disastrous war, for which they thanked God, and they also appreciated the men of the defence forces who had mounted guard during these dangerous days. Many other dangerous days lay ahead, and all men, young and old, would need to be better organised and even more active than they had been in the past two years.

FORTHCOMING APPEAL

An appeal would be made shortly for more men for the Army, and those who would be unable to offer their services would be expected to join the Local Defence Force. He stressed the importance of the local organisations, and pointed out how necessary it was that they should be as efficient as possible. No one could say what district might become the object of attack, and there was no district that could consider itself immune. Now that the harvest had been secured, he urged all men to consider, if they could not join the Army, whether they could not strengthen the L.S.F., the A.R.P. and the Red Cross services.

BOYS' BRIGADE IN NEW ORDER

RELATION TO PROBLEMS OF LIFE

A JOINT conference, at which both the Boys' Brigade and the Life Boys were widely represented, was held at Carrig Eden, Greystones, Co. Wicklow, during the week-end, when addresses dealing with every aspect of both organisations were delivered. Principal among the speakers was Mr. William H. McVickers, M.Sc., Overseas Secretary of the London headquarters, who told how companies in Great Britain were standing up to war conditions.

Mr. McVickers said that they were living in the midst of an upheaval of the whole structure of society, and added that they must never return to what will probably be called the "good old days." In Dublin and in Northern Ireland, he said, there was a far greater tradition of Church loyalty than there was on the other side of the water, where religious institutions had been losing their hold for years; this presented an unparalleled opportunity for Christians to take the initiative; they held the key to the solution of the world's problems. Members of the Boys' Brigade and Life Boys must prepare now to play their part in the reconstruction of the world.

The war, he said, had not made any appreciable difference to the vitality and spirit of Great Britain's youth, and youngsters in the "blitzed" areas were taking their troubles very calmly. Mr. McVickers told of the exploits of boys in the Brigade and in the Life Boys during raids in England. "The war has given them a new interest," he said. "and many companies have formed themselves into efficient fire-fighting or messenger services."

JUVENILE CRIME

Mr. McVickers mentioned the prevalence of juvenile delinquency in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and expressed the opinion that many of these "crimes" could have been avoided if there had been more B.B. and Life Boys' Companies. "These would provide an outlet for the energies of these boys," he added, and urged officers of both organisations to redouble their efforts to interest youths in their particular companies.

On Saturday the Rev. L. Millar, M.A., Chaplain, St. Columba's College, spoke on "A Boy's Religion," and stressed that the youngster's approach to religion was much different to that of the adult. Once the boy got interested in religion, however, there was no limit to his zeal. He told how the youth should learn to relate his religion to the problems of life, and warned parents of the danger of introducing two extremes—cold intellectualism and rank emotionalism—into their teaching. He urged that a happy medium should be found between them, and stressed also the necessity for complete co-operation between Church, school, youth organisation and all who were working for the welfare of the young.

On Sunday evening Mr. G. W. Shannon, Captain, 1st Dublin Company, in an address on "The Boys' Brigade and the New Era," said that no new era would dawn after the present darkness until individuals and nations accepted the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. Thus the B.B., with its clear objects, was more than ever needed, and might prove a great influence in hastening the arrival of a new era.

On Sunday morning Holy Communion was celebrated at Greystones Parish Church, and in the evening officers and male Life Boy leaders marched in uniform to church, where a Service was conducted by the Rev. R. G. Jenkins, Vicar of All Saints' Church, Grangegorman. The week-end was concluded with a Devotional Service, held by the Rev. E. F. Moore.

RAILWAY COUNCIL MEETS

At the first meeting of the new Sectional Council No. 2 of the Great Southern Railways Company, Mr. J. O'Dowd, assistant traffic manager, was appointed chairman of the company's side of the Council, and Mr. P. Murphy, staff clerk, secretary for the coming three years.

Mr. William Dalton, Kingsbridge, was appointed secretary to the workers' side of the Council, and Mr. Sean Murray chairman.

The Council will interpret national railway agreements, and deal with various problems which arise on wages and conditions of employment.

MR. DE VALERA'S REFERENCE TO BRITAIN

DESPITE TEMPTATIONS, HAS NOT BEHAVED UNWORTHILY

IN a speech that he made at Mullingar yesterday, in which he stressed the dangerous position of this country—obviously tempting to both sets of combatants in the war—Mr. de Valera referred to the attitude of Britain.

"So far," he said, "our rights have been in the main respected, and I think it only fair in this connection to acknowledge that the belligerent nearest to us—Great Britain—despite the temptations and urgings of certain propagandists, has not succumbed to them, and has not behaved unworthily."

Warning the nation of the need for continued vigilance, Mr. de Valera said that there could be no manœuvring, no subtlety, no finessing. They had chosen and pursued a simple and bold policy, which had the support of the vast majority of the citizens.

THE COUNTRY'S POLICY

Mr. de Valera was reviewing a parade of the L.D.F., and he told them that now they were a well-disciplined body, and every officer and man should regard time spent in preparation as precious for himself, his comrades, and the country.

"For two years," he said, "God has mercifully saved us from being directly involved in this savage war which has brought death and misery to so many nations. We pray that God may continue this mercy to us, but we have no right to expect Him to do so if we do not help ourselves in the natural order which He has ordained. If we wish for God's help we must do our part and fit ourselves to meet an aggressor with the greatest strength that we can command.

"Through no fault of ours our nation is in a position of the greatest danger. Numerically small, we are placed geographically in a position obviously tempting to both sides of combatants. Under God, nothing but constant vigilance and unflinching determination can save us. In our situation there can be no manœuvring, no subtlety, and no finessing. A simple, bold policy is the only practicable one, a policy which every citizen can understand, and for which the maximum measure of assent can be obtained."

Stating that they had pursued a simple, bold policy since this war began, Mr. de Valera continued: "We have made it unmistakably clear that we did not wish to be involved in the war; that we were not prepared to tolerate any violations of our territory, and that we would resist any aggressor to the last atom of our strength.

NO DESIRE TO INJURE

"This policy has had the support of all parties and of the overwhelming majority of our citizens. If we be attacked we shall be in a position to face the ordeal as a united people. Whoever attacks us will by that fact have proclaimed himself an aggressor, no matter what his pretences may be, and have proved himself our enemy. We desire to injure nobody. We have a right to decide our own course in peace. Whoever will try by force to wrest that right from us will have proved himself an enemy of honest liberty everywhere.

"There are little groups on the one side and the other who are still holding themselves apart from the main body of the nation, claiming to be wiser or more patriotic than the rest of us. This is not the occasion to deal with them in detail. I will only repeat what I have said before—that whoever would bring a foreign Power in here in defiance of the wishes of the vast majority of our people will have his name execrated by the Irish people as that of Diarmuid McMurrough was during the seven and a half centuries that his treacherous folly kept this nation in chains. To let in the stranger is easy; to get him out again may mean centuries of blood and sacrifice.

The Irish people want neither an old master nor a new one. You are here to-day to pledge with your lives that they shall not have either. We have shown ourselves ready to join in any world organisation of free peoples designed for the general welfare of mankind and for the maintenance of peace on the only basis on which peace can be built and endure—justice for all and fairplay for the little as for the great. We are ready to make as members in such an organisation the same sacrifices that other nations make. We can do no more.

"The course we have chosen, though the only one possible, is a difficult course. Small nations in the path of great Powers are generally treated with scant consideration. So far our rights have been in the main respected, and I think it only fair in this connection to acknowledge that the belligerent nearest to us, Great Britain, despite the temptations and the urgings of certain propagandists, has not succumbed to them and has not behaved unworthily.

INCREASING RISKS

"With the shifting of the main theatre of war there is a danger, however, that our people may have become careless or less vigilant. That would be fatal if continued. There must be no relaxing. Our risks while this war lasts will inevitably increase from day to day. We must meet them with increased and more disciplined effort in preparation—with greater national solidarity than ever before. We must increase the strength of our defence forces till every man capable of bearing arms and not required for some other vital national work is a trained soldier. We must make sure in particular that the permanent force, those whole time with the Colours, are at the desired strength. They are not at that strength now. There has been the natural wastage, and more men are now urgently necessary.

"I appeal to the young men of the nation to come forward and join without delay. They are required to protect the freedom which has been won at such a great price, and to ensure that our people shall not become a subject race again. I am confident that the character of our young men has not changed, and that I shall not appeal in vain. The coming months are all important. Do not say that there is not sufficient equipment. Equipment may yet be got. Remember a trained man can be equipped in a night, but the best weapons are worthless to a man untrained to use them, and a year's training may be necessary to use them properly.

YOUNG AND OLD

"Every young man who is unable to join the permanent forces should join the Local Defence Force. That force needs strengthening also, and its links with the permanent forces must be brought more close.

"The older men should join the L.S.F. The other national defence services also require manning. In particular, the A.R.P. services, the medical and Red Cross services require very many more before they reach their effective strengths. Every man in the nation can find a place to serve, and every woman, too. Remember the very existence of the nation may be at stake—and to neglect any possible defensive preparation would be a crime. The time for preparation is now.

"Our cause is clean and just and noble. We need have no heart-searchings in the prosecution of it. If we behave worthily we can hope with confidence that God will bless our efforts."

Irish Cambridgeshire Won by a Head

THE Irish Cambridgeshire, run at the Curragh on Saturday, was won by Mrs. M. Dawson's Mill Boy, who, in an exciting finish, held off the strong challenge of Lady Lambart's The Abbot of Hainault, to score by a head, while, two lengths off, Mrs. J. McEnery's Meadow Fescue finished third. The Abbot of Hainault was the best backed horse in the betting on the course, and shared favouritism with Radiologist. The latter was well beaten a furlong from home, and, being unable to take an opening which presented itself, he, in company with Free Lover and several others, got crowded out on the rails side, while Mill Boy, out clear by himself on the stand side, was pegging along at the head of the field. Close home the Abbot of Hainault tackled him, but young T. P. Burns, riding out a vigorous finish, retained the lead on Mill Boy. It was a complete reversal of form as between the winner and Radiologist compared to the last meeting, where Radiologist beat Mrs. Dawson's horse by two lengths over the same course, but the weights now favoured Mill Boy to the extent of 5lb.

It was a popular win despite the fact that few profited by it, for the Dawson family has been long associated with racing, and the training stable at Rathbride Manor has turned out winners of races, big and small, for generations. It was Mill Boy's first score this season, but he was a thoroughly exposed horse, having finished second on three occasions. Balbriggan and Dunsevericks were prominent in the early stages, but faded out after six furlongs, and of the others Rhoscolyn made the best showing, finishing fourth just in front of Free Lover.

It was, on the whole, a bad day for favourites, and both Cora Koosh and Winter Berg, the best supported candidates for the National Produce Stakes, also failed. This race was won in much the same way as the Irish Cambridgeshire, Lord Glentoran's Red Tom, in the blue silks of Mrs. Dawson, with clear run all the way, and when observed and looked like crossing the horses on the far side Wing, using his whip with the right hand, got him straightened out again, and he gained a clear victory by a length and a half from Winter Berg, with Sporran half a length off third.

The best betting race of the day was the Maiden Plate, five horses being supported at odds ranging from three to six-to-one, and also provided a fine finish, Balrennett, the property of Jack Chaucer's owner, scoring by a neck from Cardinal Wolsey. It was Balrennett's neck also that Major D. McCalmont's Zog got the verdict in another rousing finish for the Loughbrown Plate, that distance separating him from Mr. Joe Griffin's Royal Concert, and the winner was sold subsequently to Mr. D. Fenton for 110 sovs. Backers had their turn when Loango beat sixteen other runners for the Juvenile Plate. Details:—

Corinthians Surprise Trinity

There was one big surprise in the four Senior and League "A" matches in Dublin on Saturday, Corinthians, despite their new forward line, defeated Dublin University by a goal to nil at Londonbridge road. On paper Trinity have a very strong team, but after Hill had forced the ball over the goal line in a scramble a couple of minutes after the start, the Corinthian defence held out right to the end under constant pressure. The Trinity forwards could not control their shooting, and, in addition, the Corinthians' defence was excellent, Lindsay playing a wonderful game at left full-back.

The League champions, Three Rock Rovers, made a remarkable start to their campaign, scoring six goals against two by Railway Union, at Londonbridge road. The winners' forwards combined excellently and the Railway backs—Power and Rastable—did better than the score represents. W. Pilkington, at top form at inside left for the winners, scored three goals, MacDonogh got two from penalty corners, and Russell got the other. Leopold, at centre-half from a penalty corner, were Railway scorers.

Getting the winning goal a minute from the end, Pembroke Wanderers did not impress against a Monkstown team which was without H. G. C. Legge, and played a man short. Hanrahan was outstanding for the losers, and D'Arcy did fine work at centre-half for Pembroke. McNulty gave Pembroke an early lead from a penalty corner, but Whitestone equalised. Mara cut through to give Raby a nice pass to get the decider.

With F. B. O'Kelly to strengthen the attack, Portrane gave Y.M.C.A. quite a good game at Claremont road, but the home side were too efficient all round. Williams scored the opening goal right after the start, and Sanderson, from a corner, and Barrett put them into the picture. Barrett got the only goal of a well-fought second half.

Brave Damsel Wins Irish Derby

The final of the Irish Derby attracted a very big attendance to Shelbourne Park on Saturday night, but the backers could not have enjoyed themselves, as not a single favourite won in eight races. Mr. J. A. Byrne's bitch, Brave Damsel, won the big event, and in doing so made the maximum use of number one box. She got away well, kept on the rails all the time, and never sacrificed the lead, to finish a length ahead of the other bitch, She's Tidy. Time—30.64 seconds—was moderate for the most important race of the season. Details:—

IRISH DERBY FINAL (525 Yards)—Mr. J. A. Byrne's b. b. BRAVE DAMSEL (Maiden's Boy—Queen of the Snir), (1), 4/1, 1; Mrs. K. Sheehy's SHE'S TIDY (3), 3/1, 2; Mr. Barry's and Miss O'Brien's GAELIC INLER (4), 5/2, 3. Also ran—Pretty Forethought (2), 6/1; Heatherset Hero (5), 7/4. 1l.; ¾l. 30.64 secs.

Trinity Out of Luck

OLD BELVEDERE .. 8 DUBLIN U..... 3

VERY surprisingly Trinity forwards completely eclipsed the Old Belvedere pack in the scrums at Jones's road on Saturday, but their backs, attacking continuously in the second half, could not press home their advantage, and, much against the run of the play, Belvedere won by a goal and a try to a penalty goal. Both sides were below full strength, but the losers probably were more affected by having to play men out of position in the three-quarter line. P. Anderson, their full-back, being one wing and D. R. Doyle operated in the centre. Trinity had no luck whatever, but many splendid opportunities were wasted as the result of forward passes and weak finishing.

H. de Lacey and E. A. Carry, at half-back, opened up the game well, but the task of beating the defence was left to S. Walsh, who ran hard and straight and with great resolution in the centre, but had not quite sufficient pace to get away from J. A. Byrne, who stuck to him like a leech. L. C. Jacobson enjoyed a triumph as "hooker," and, with F. Skuce, M. Solomons, and J. B. Fitzsimons, was prominent in the loose.

Denied chances in attack, the Belvedere backs covered up and tackled very soundly in defence. The forwards had a few good rushes, but, with the opposition getting so much of the ball, they got few opportunities of coming into the picture. J. O'Dwyer, S. Henry, P. O'Sullivan, and M. O'Neill were most noticeable.

Carry opened the scoring with a penalty goal for Trinity, but a try by McNeills following a fine cut through by F. Quinn, left the score level at the interval. A good forward rush produced a try by O'Neill for Belvedere in the second half, F. Quinn goaling.

ROBERTSON AGAIN

WANDERERS.. 14 BLACKROCK... 0

Playing at centre three-quarter instead of his accustomed position at out-half, B. Robertson, the Wanderers' captain, again had a big say in the victory of his side over Blackrock College at Lansdowne road by 2 goals and 3 tries to nil. He scored two of the tries and converted one, and played a very clever game throughout. Blackrock were below strength, but in the second half they fought back well, and had hard luck on a couple of occasions in not scoring.

It was a fast and open game, but the quality of the football was poor, and the respective three-quarter divisions were faulty handling. Wanderers had much the better of matters in the first half, and the interval. Their first score was a penalty try, awarded when G. Cruise, having beaten the defence, was obstructed just on the line. Robertson had no difficulty in converting. A few minutes later Wanderers got another try when Robertson crossed for a soft try which he failed to convert. Then, just before the interval, Robertson scored again, the try being the outcome of a good passing bout, in which Cruise and McGibney took part. Harvey failed to goal. The second period was keenly contested, and Blackrock had many strong attacks, but their score was a try for Wanderers by Myles, who crossed after a good movement, but the kick at goal again failed.

FINE GOAL-KICKING

OLD WESLEY... 25 MONKSTOWN... 8

Old Wesley gave a satisfactory display at Donnybrook, when they beat Monkstown by 5 goals (25 points) to a goal and a try (8 points). Their backs did best work for them, C. R. Griffin, the out-half, with some fine place kicking, converting their five tries, while he and his partner, F. L. Wolfe, were also prominent. The Monkstown forwards got the ball from most of the scrummages, and the team, generally, deserve credit for playing an even second half after they had been in front from the first period.

Old Wesley scored in the first couple of minutes, Wolfe fielding a high ball, and running through for a try, which Griffin goaled, as he did those obtained by Lalor, Henry, F. D. Polden, Wolfe and N. McConnell added tries in the second period, Griffin, as usual, converting. Monkstown played up well, and J. N. Atkinson and B. Harte got tries, to one of which L. Craig added goal points.

GOOD RECRUITS

CLONTARF..... 12 PALMERSTON.... 3

At Clonskeagh, Clontarf defeated Palmerston by 3 goals (1 penalty, 1 dropped) to a penalty goal. Clontarf were without the services of F. G. Moran, who is in the injured list, and it was quite evident how much the team missed him.

M. B. Williams played in his usual masterful style for Clontarf. Hoey, a recruit from the second team, gave a promising display in the centre. Small of build, he made up for his lack of inches by pluck and determination. T. Lennon, who played with great for University College, Galway, and Connaught, played a splendid game as out-half. He appears to be a footballer of high ability, and will be a valuable addition to the Clontarf Club. The forwards, some of whom were not fully trained, Guiney, Lyons and Clarke were prominent.

Redmond was very sound as full-back for Palmerston, and Russell stood out on his own in the three-quarter line. Flynn played pluckily as scrum-half, but did not appear at home in this position. It seems a pity that Palmerston find it necessary to take this clever forward from the pack, but no doubt he will be back again before long. Towson, Phair and Merrey were best of a good pack.

Flynn opened the scoring for Palmerston with a penalty, and Lenihan smartly dropped a goal for Clontarf. In the second half Lenihan scored for Clontarf after a good run, M. Williams converting, and M. Williams added a penalty goal.

U.C.D. FADE OUT

SECTIVE ..... 9 U.C.D. 8

Having dominated the exchanges for three-quarters of the game at Belfield on Saturday, U.C.D. faded out in the last twenty minutes, and finally lost to Bective Rangers by three tries to a goal and a try. Faulty handling and lack of thrust in the centre had prevented the College from building up a substantial lead in the lengthy period during which a fine pack, with E. Lanigan, P. O'Donoghue and D. Ryan most prominent, had provided abundant opportunities. J. Leonard and D. Kenneally were sound half-backs, but there was no connecting link between them and the apparent scoring power on the wings, where K. O'Flanagan and P. O'Donnell made the most of limited chances. A. O'Meara was the outstanding forward on the field throughout. He rallied a beaten Bective pack to take control in the closing stages. D. O'Neill, J. Doyle and D. McCarthy giving full support.

Midway through the first half U.C.D. took the lead, when B. Dixon scored a try which C. Nolan failed to convert. Just before half-time W. Duggan got over at the corner for Bective, and M. Forde failed with the kick. K. O'Flanagan nipped in to cap a good U.C.D. rush, led by Lanigan and O'Donoghue, for a try under the posts which D. Ryan converted; but subsequently Bective took charge, and E. Doyle got over twice.

LANSDOWNE WIN

LANSDOWNE..... 6 NORTH..... 0

Displaying greater dash and vigour forward and superior pace and skill behind the scrum, Lansdowne defeated North of Ireland at Ormeau by two tries (six points) to nil. North forwards scrummaged well, but the backs lacked cohesion, and the forwards were slower in the loose. It was, however, the home side's first match, and there were several new players in the side. Murray and Mitchell scored for Lansdowne.

Dundalk Join "Gate" in Shield Lead

DUNDALK have joined St. James's Gate at the top of the Shield table, each having gained seven points from the four matches played. St. James's Gate were lucky to escape defeat from Drumcondra, whereas Dundalk, by a wonderful rally late in the second half, managed to wipe a two goals' deficit and defeat Cork.

Limerick were again in rampant scoring mood, and got seven goals against Bray Unknowns, Byrne again having four to his credit, while Bohemians scored five against Shelbourne, three being got by the new centre-forward, Crowe. Thanks to a splendid individual effort of Cochrane, Shamrock Rovers took both points from Brideville. Results and scorers:—

Drumcondra, 1; St. James's Gate, 1. O'Brien for Drumcondra; Gaughran for St. James's Gate.

Dundalk, 3; Cork, 2. Laverty, Kelly and McCartney for Dundalk; McCarthy and Hyde for Cork.

Brideville, 2; Shamrock Rovers, 3. D. Dunne and Smyth for Brideville; Bryson (penalty), Foy and Cochrane for Rovers.

Limerick, 7; Bray Unknowns, 2. Byrne (4), Robinson, Buchanan and McAleer for Limerick; McIntyre and Dunne for Bray.

Bohemians, 5; Shelbourne, 1. Crowe (3), Fullen (2) for Bohemians; Fallon (penalty) for Shelbourne.

The table reads:—

	P.	W.	D.	L.	F.	A.	Pts.
St. James's Gate	4	3	1	0	10	5	7
Dundalk	4	3	1	0	12	8	7
Bohemians	4	2	1	1	12	7	5
Shamrock Rovers..	4	2	1	1	13	12	5
Limerick	4	2	1	1	20	13	5
Shelbourne	4	2	0	2	8	10	4
Cork United	4	2	0	2	12	11	4
Bray Unknowns..	4	1	0	3	8	12	2
Drumcondra	4	0	1	3	5	14	1
Brideville	4	0	0	4	4	15	0

DAVID COCHRANE, THE MATCH-WINNER

David Cochrane, Shamrock Rovers' outside right, has frequently demonstrated his ability as a match-winner, and he was again the outstanding figure in his team's success at Harold's Cross yesterday.

Had the result been a draw it would have been a more equitable one, for Brideville, after having the better of the first half, had a fair share of the exchanges in the second period, but were out of luck in their shooting. It was a disappointing exhibition on the part of both teams, Brideville, though more forceful in their methods in the first half, showed little skill in rounding off their attacks, and Rovers, even when having less of the play, always shaped like potential winners once they got on level terms. Actually they almost got a shock, and would not have collected both points had it not been for Cochrane's skill in seizing his chance as he did in the last five minutes.

Brideville took the lead after 27 minutes, when P. Dunne centred, and D. Dunne shot past Twomey. This was the only goal in the opening period. Ten minutes after the re-start Bryson converted a penalty, to put Rovers level. E. Dunne lost a grand chance for Brideville when, with a clear field, he shot straight at the 'keeper, and in 22 minutes Foy, from a cross by Leeney, netted Rovers's second. Three minutes later, following a free kick by McCarthy, Smyth put Brideville on equal terms. About ten minutes from the end Rovers lost their left full back, Healy, who retired injured, and a draw seemed likely when, with about five minutes to go, Cochrane got possession from Jimmy Dunne near the half-way line. Although tackled by three Brideville defenders in turn, Rovers' winger held on in fine style, and pressed through to score the winning goal from close in.

DEFENCE SAVES ST. JAMES'S GATE

St. James's Gate may thank their defence and a little luck for coming away from Tolka Park yesterday with their unbeaten Shield record intact. They just scraped through to take a point from a lively Drumcondra team, who should have won but for faulty shooting by the forwards, especially Dempsey. Dumpson was in great form at full-back for the visitors, and pulled his side out of many awkward situations.

Although both scores came in the first half, the second period produced the better football and the majority of the thrills. Drumcondra were unlucky not to have finished in the lead at the turn-over, and misfortune dogged them still further when Clarke, centre-half, retired ten minutes from time with a head injury.

Murtagh did great work in goal for the "Gate" and Kelly, Thompson and Matthews were tireless stalwarts in the back division. Ward, Bonner and Rogers were the pick of the forward line. Doherty was good for Drumcondra, as also was Douglas, Hutchinson and Clarke. The two inside-forwards, Daly and O'Brien, were best in the Drums' front line.

Drumcondra went away from the start, and after three minutes, from a header by McNamara, O'Brien shot to the net, and immediately afterwards Daly, with a lovely drive, almost beat Murtagh. The "Gate" retaliated, and their first close move finished with Ward striking the upright, and Rogers finishing a fine movement by shooting over the bar. Murtagh saved brilliantly from Dempsey, and Gaughran headed through the equaliser in the twentieth minute following a corner by O'Rourke.

Play livened up in the second half, and in the first few minutes Daly hit the crossbar, while O'Rourke, at the other end, had his shot saved by Doherty. Murtagh was called on to give full-lengths to save from McNamara and Drumcondra kept up the pressure to the finish, but a stubborn "Gate" defence held out.

SECOND-HALF GOALS

At Balymount Park on Saturday a delightful exhibition of attacking play, which Bohemian team, in which fault could not be found in any department, Crowe, the new centre-forward, who scored three goals against Limerick last week, scored three more against Shelbourne, and on his display can be ranked as one of the real "finds" of the season. Fallon, Shelbourne's centre-half, was a real stumbling block to the lively Bohemian attack until well into the second half, when they had the Shelbourne defence well beaten. Shelbourne never at any period looked like the team that won the City Cup, and although lucky to be on level terms at half-time, when Gavin went off injured, they faded out completely.

There was no score in the first half, but two minutes after the turn over Crowe put Bohemians ahead with a shot which left McCarthy helpless, and two minutes later, from a cross by O'Flanagan, Fullen got the second. In the twentieth minute Crowe made made it 3-0, but a couple of minutes later Fallon scored for Shelbourne from a penalty, following a foul on Bradshaw. After twenty-six minutes Fullen scored Bohemians' fourth goal, and four minutes later Crowe raced through to score again.

Gold Cup.—Glentoran 5, Cliftonville 3; Distillery 2, Linfield 2; Belfast Celtic 3, Derry City 2.

The Irish Times

MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1941.

"Not Unworthily"

Mr. de Valera's speech at Mullingar yesterday ought to come as a useful warning to those who are inclined to think that all danger of a violation of Irish neutrality has passed. The Taoiseach pointed out, very wisely, that, since the centre of gravity of the war had moved for the moment from this part of the world, many Irish people had become complacent, taking the view that because nothing had happened to Ireland in the past, nothing would be likely to happen to her in the future. This attitude of mind, as Mr. de Valera remarked, is thoroughly dangerous. There are many in this country who profess to believe that Ireland's geographic position is a guarantee against invasion, just as millions of Frenchmen two years ago were convinced that their safety was ensured by the existence of the Maginot Line. The Taoiseach declared that the very opposite was the case. Ireland lies in the middle of the world's greatest battlefield. For the time being there is a lull in the struggle between Germany and Great Britain, solely because the Germans are preoccupied in Russia; but there is no reason to doubt that it will be resumed with increased intensity so soon as the Russian situation shall have been "liquidated." In these circumstances, Mr. de Valera said that there must be no relaxation of effort in Ireland. "Under God," he exclaimed, "nothing but constant vigilance and unflinching determination can save us." The Taoiseach has his faults; but it hardly could be said that he is a scaremonger. He is in a position to gauge the national position more accurately than the many self-satisfied soothsayers whose ancestral voices continue to prophesy not war, but perpetual peace for our island. Admittedly, the danger of invasion is not so imminent as it seemed to be at one stage of the war; but who can tell what will happen during the next six months, or even the next six weeks? The Irish people must be prepared for every emergency. They have responded reasonably well to the Government's call for national effort; but Mr. de Valera makes it clear that the response has not been nearly sufficient. Men are needed for the Permanent Army, for the Local Defence and Security Forces, for Air Raid Precaution work, for the Red Cross, for firefighting, and a number of other voluntary services, the co-ordination of which is Ireland's surest protection against attack.

Nobody in his senses believes that this little nation could wage a successful campaign single-handed against any of the major belligerents; but, with adequate preparation, its armed forces could give a respectable account of themselves in the event of attack, and, as the Taoiseach said, it is useless to rely on Divine protection if our people are not ready to help to protect themselves. We have appealed on many occasions to the young men of this country to do their duty in the present crisis. While the youth of other countries is being slaughtered, Ireland has been spared; and surely it is not too much to ask her able-bodied citizens to do something to express their gratitude? There is a place for everybody in the national organisation—for women as well as for men, for the middle-aged as well as for the young. For the first time in modern Irish history all differences of politics, of creed, and of class have been swept away; and Mr. de Valera was able to declare yesterday that, if Ireland should be attacked, "we shall be in a position to face the ordeal as a united people." This appalling war, which has brought so much suffering and devastation to the world, at least has done this much for the Irish nation. The fullest advantage ought to be taken of the fact that a hitherto unimagined measure of national unity has been achieved. It is something of which every Irish citizen ought to be proud; Charles Stewart Parnell, who died fifty years ago to-day, would have rejoiced in it. We shall be forgiven if we express our own pleasure at another aspect of the situation, to which the Taoiseach drew attention at Mullingar. We refer to the improved relations between Ireland and her British neighbours. "I think it only fair," said Mr. de Valera, "to acknowledge that the belligerent nearest to us, Great Britain, in spite of the temptations and urgings of certain propagandists, has not succumbed to them, and has not behaved unworthily." May we welcome this tribute from the lips of our national leader? Only a few years ago Mr. de Valera himself was in arms against the British Empire; his speech at Mullingar bears witness to the fact that he, too, has not behaved unworthily.

In the Air

During the last Great War flying advanced from the experimental stage to the practical. Up to the summer of 1914 men who attempted to fly were regarded as daring adventurers, and thousands of spectators would flock to aeronautical exhibitions, where the craft of the period did little more than take off and land again. Within a year of war's outbreak the aeroplanes of the belligerents had been improved enormously. They were faster, safer, and had a much higher "ceiling." Judged by modern standards, they seem to have been weird and dangerous machines, but the thousands of men who flew them thought them to be admirable craft. Many of them crashed as a result of the terrific strains imposed upon their delicate construction in the heat of air combat, but as the war progressed it became more and more rare for wings to drop off in mid-air or for machines to go down out of control because of some technical imperfection in their design. The greatest engineers of Britain, France and Germany concentrated upon the improvement of their respective countries' aircraft and aircraft engines. With plenty of governmental assistance behind them, they were free to experiment without being troubled or impeded by such considerations as the cost. As a result, more was accomplished in four years than might normally have been accomplished in ten. It was the progress due to the war that enabled John Alcock and Arthur Whitten-Brown to fly the Atlantic in 1919 in what had been designed originally as a bomber. It is significant that eight years elapsed before the Atlantic was flown for a second time. There were, of course, disadvantages in the acceleration of aircraft design due to the war. The machines that were perfected in 1914-1918 were machines for a military purpose, and for many years after the war the commercial craft that were constructed for peace-time flying were adaptations of military designs, or were strongly influenced by the work of military designers.

The commercial 'plane, as a completely independent and separate type, was just coming into its own when the present war began. It is obvious that this war is going to do almost as much for flying as did the last. Millions of young men have, or will, become familiar with aircraft and flying, and it is not improbable that the general public, when hostilities cease, will accept the aeroplane as a machine as safe and familiar as the motor car was twenty years ago. There could be no better example of the progress of flying in the last few years than the fact that the Atlantic crossing, once regarded as a hazardous adventure, now is a weekly job of work for the ferry pilots crossing from Canada and the United States. Week-end trips to America and back, regarded but recently as a piece of delightful fancy, have become not only a possibility, but a probability, of the early future. Long-distance trips and night flying also are likely to become more popular. Many a man who used the Croydon to Le Touquet service regularly would have drawn the line at a non-stop trip to Athens or Istanbul. Now that thousand-mile journeys by air have become an everyday occurrence for pilots in the fighting Services, they must eventually become a safer and a usual method of travelling for business men and holiday-makers, while the progress made in night flying should result in a great deal of time being saved in the future through journeys after dark. There may be justification for some of the pessimistic forebodings about lean times after the war and the fact that the cost of the conflict will have to be met by everyone, whether he be neutral or belligerent. At the same time, there will be compensations. Continental travelling eventually should be even more popular than it was in the years before 1939, and the aeroplane will play a bigger part than ever, permitting greater distances to be covered. Eight-day holidays to Palestine may some day be within reach of families with moderate incomes.

A Novel Idea

According to a recent report from America, a certain well-known engineering company has found its own way of disposing of the crowds of curious onlookers which gather about its workmen while they are engaged in digging holes in the road. Apparently this company had been working on a large excavation for some time, but the immense numbers of people who came and stood on the brink of the working interfered with the workmen, who rather resented the fact that they were providing so many people with free entertainment. The company then decided to take action against these onlookers, but, instead of removing them by any ungentle method, or even retaining the services of a few policemen to insist that they "move along," engaged some extra workmen to build a grand stand, complete with ice-cream soda fountain, and all the amenities of modern American civilisation just in front of the excavation. Now, on payment of a small sum of money, the passers-by can obtain a comfortable seat on a grand stand and watch the work in progress while sipping an ice-cream soda, devouring a packet of pea-nuts, gnawing a wad of chewing-gum or indulging in any of the more popular American pastimes. The system seems to suit everybody. The company is satisfied because the stand so far has proved a paying proposition; the people are satisfied because, when they have to pay for anything, they feel they are getting better value; and the workmen are happier because they feel that they must be pretty good if people are willing to pay in order to watch them. While we must congratulate the company for the neat way in which they have escaped the difficulty of the gaping hordes and on their attempt to turn the crowds into a source of wealth, we cannot believe that the system will continue to yield substantial dividends; admittedly, for the first few weeks the people will come in hundreds, but more through curiosity than for any other reason, and, once the novelty has worn off, the crowds will begin to thin out. The fatal charm of excavation-watching lies in its unexpectedness; one goes out to buy a pair of shoes, and stays to watch a hole in the road. Rarely, if ever, does one go out with the definite intention of finding an excavation to watch, while the idea of bringing one's wife and family out for the evening, to sit in the front row of the stand and watch things at close range for a few hours, seems absurd. For this reason, once the novelty wears off, the grand stand must fail; for one cannot expect women to appreciate the finer points of excavation-watching, and the men would prefer to watch without a grand stand.

BISHOP OF CASHEL ON THE POPULAR IDEAL

Taking as his subject the story of the rich fool (12th Chap. et seq. St. Luke), the Right Rev. Dr. Harvey, Bishop of Cashel and Waterford, in his sermon at the Harvest Festival in St. George's Church, Dublin, last night, said that what Christ condemned in the rich fool's outlook on his abundant crops was that there was no idea or thought of God. That was very much the outlook of the world of to-day. The popular ideal was to get everything and give nothing. Dare anyone say that of recent years they had not been living much less dominated by the thought of God, or that religion was not actually interfering with the major purpose of their lives? The characteristic of the age had been the pursuit and acquisition of the resources of the world for their own enjoyment. War was the last resort of the "have nots."

The Service was conducted by the Rev. Brian Harvey, in the regrettable absence through indisposition of the Rector, the Rev. Canon Campbell.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

OFFICIALS at the London office of the Agent-General for Victoria are wondering if the Dublin Corporation will come to a favourable decision about a portrait of Queen Victoria, painted by Stephen Catterson Smith, which hung in the Mansion House for eighty-six years until its removal at the request of the Lord Mayor, Mrs. Clarke, two years ago. In May of last year a well-known Melbourne enthusiast asked the Agent-General for Victoria to try to secure the portrait for the Melbourne Art Gallery. No price was mentioned in the Australian connoisseur's letter, but it was felt, apparently, that the Corporation would be open to a reasonable offer. The painter was President of the Royal Hibernian Academy in 1849.

Radio War

In Britain no fewer than one hundred linguists prepare three hundred radio bulletins in the twenty-four hours. Proficient in twenty languages, their typewritten reports run into 150,000 words a day. Quartered in a remote town, they listen for news, for items of interest to the fighting Services, and for statements useful for counter-propaganda. An announcement of the Italian Admiralty, for instance, will reach the Admiralty in Whitehall within ten minutes after Rome has spoken. The staff includes men and women experts in Irish. The posts for linguists are fairly well paid, but French, of course, is not regarded as an extra language at all, so many know it, whereas if you knew Arabic well just now you would be very valuable.

U.S. Profits

The United States Administration is investigating a more reasonable excess profits tax on all big company profits, whether from munitions or not; for the war boom is not confined to industries directly connected with defence. Under the present rule normal profits, no matter how high, are exempt. A controversy is, therefore, raging round last year's Coco-Cola profit of 43,875,000 dollars, and, according to published reports, the company will further substantially increase its earning capacity on invested capital to 60 per cent. this year. Under the present law it can make 37,127,000 dollars, or 42 per cent. of its capital, without paying any excess profits tax, as this was the pre-war average. The president of Coco-Cola is "Big Jim" Farley, former United States Postmaster-General and Chairman of the Democratic Party. He was President Roosevelt's right-hand man in the last two election campaigns, and played a big part in his return to power.

Fire-fighting

During the great air raids on Plymouth during March and April the Civil Defence Services displayed dauntless courage and suffered grievous casualties. They made the best of a situation which was overwhelming beyond all previous conception. The authorities have now made sure that there shall not again be the shortage of water, which meant that many fires could not be fought at all, and had to be left to burn themselves out. A big conference there yesterday, presided over by the Regional Commissioner, Major-General G. M. Lindsay, who was born at Glasnevin House, Dublin, worked for hours through a regional exercise on a suppositious air raid on Plymouth, Saltash, and Torpoint. Plans were completed for the speedy reception, feeding and accommodation of bombed-out peoples transported to rest centres outside the city. This theoretical exercise is to be followed by actual trial mobilisations. The preparations are now on a scale which General Lindsay promises will be adequate next time if a next time comes.

Personalities

Mr. Grattan O'Leary, associate editor of the Ottawa journal dailies, noted B.B.C. broadcaster on Canadian affairs, and one of twelve Canadian editors now on a tour of England, will visit Dublin about the end of the week. He visited Ireland in 1921 and 1922, and again in recent years.

History was made by Mr. Hector Hughes, K.C., during the week, when he led for Antonio Mancini in his House of Lords' appeal against the death sentence. It was only the third appeal against a murder sentence heard by the Lords, who are to announce their verdict within a day or two

Air Mail, Threepence

Under the caption, "Air Mail, Threepence," in Saturday's London Letter, it was stated that the extension of the air-graph service was "another feather in the cap of Lieutenant-Colonel W. D. Kenny." The name should have been given as Brigadier-General Vincent R. Kenny.

HONOURING PARNELL'S MEMORY

THIS WEEK'S CELEBRATIONS

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL died fifty years ago. This week Dublin, and Ireland generally, will observe the fiftieth anniversary of his death. A Parnell Anniversary Week, organised by the Dublin-Wicklowmen's Association on a national basis, will feature several events associated with the former Irish leader. Flags will be flown mast-high in the city throughout the week.

One of the most tragic figures in Ireland's tragic political history will be commemorated in song and in story. Almost all his close associates have passed away—the only survivor of "Room 15" is Captain Henry Harrison, who was Secretary to the "Chief"—and few are left who might write intimately of the proud, somewhat vain, man, who, more successfully than any other leader since O'Connell, had welded the Irish nation into a solid support behind what was hoped to be the most impressive political force marshalled by this country in the British Parliament. After an all-too-short ten years of leadership, the Squire of Avondale went the way of the majority of Irish leaders. Whether his downfall had been engineered did not matter—he was dead, and his work had been sundered.

One man who, perhaps, is best qualified to write about Parnell, here sets down his impressions of that epic period in Ireland's political struggle. He is Judge Mathew Kenny, former Circuit Court Judge in Cork, who, as a member for Clare, had the privilege of serving under the "Chief," and, as a member of the Irish Nationalist Party, of knowing him in the good times and the bad.

This photograph has been kindly lent by Major A. K. Macdonald, only son of the Rev. William A. Macdonald, M.A., Scholar, T.C.D., the blind member of the Ossory division of Queen's County, 1886-1892, who supported Parnell in Committee Room 15.

"I KNEW HIM WELL"

A PERSONAL SKETCH

By HIS HONOR JUDGE M. J. KENNY.

SOME time last year, at the invitation of the Irish Times, I was given an opportunity of summarising the work of the Irish Party under Parnell's leadership from 1880 to 1890. On the 50th anniversary of his death I am asked to give my impressions of his personality, and also to deal with some of the events immediately preceding his death. The character of a great man is always an interesting subject for study, but it obviously requires time and thought to treat of it fully and accurately.

It is said that the life of any man can only be written by a person who lived with him and knew him well. If so, the life of Parnell will never be written, for all who lived with him and knew him well have passed away except myself, and I am not a writer.

When I entered the House of Commons in 1882 Parnell had been leader of the Party for nearly three years. He commanded the confidence of the Irish people more completely than had anyone since O'Connell, and he had the additional advantage of a solid parliamentary following, which O'Connell never had. By some stroke of good fortune, long overdue, the Irish people found themselves with a parliamentary representation composed of a body of young men of extraordinary ability and most unselfish devotion. Nothing like it had happened before, and nothing like it has happened since. With this material Parnell set to work. He "took his coat off," to use his own expression, and his work for the next ten years is the history of Ireland.

FAULTLESS PRECISION

What sort was this man who wrought such a change? His family history is well known and need only be referred to, but his mentality and personal qualities are of greater interest. He was quiet, and slightly reserved in his manner; spoke with an English accent of the best kind, and with faultless precision. It was this quality which led Mr. Gladstone on one occasion to say in the course of a debate that he "knew no man who could express his meaning so clearly, in so few words, as the honourable member for Cork." He was a proud man, not in the common sense, but, as some one said of Swift—proud-souled; that is, he was conscious of his ability and of his mission to lead men. He was also slightly vain. This may be easily pardoned, for his personal appearance was greatly in his favour. He possessed great manly beauty, and in the Court of Queen Elizabeth might have outrivalled Sir Christopher Hatton.

He was easy of approach and, although it could not be said of him, as Clarendon said of Hampden, that he was "of flowing courtesy to all men," yet he was extremely courteous to his friends and all people who had business to transact with him.

One of the strongest prejudices in his mind was, I noticed, his dislike of Englishmen. Never expressed in public, he often in private dropped expressions which showed his strong feelings. The Englishmen of that day were arrogant, overbearing, over-confident in their own infallibility, and consciously unjust to Ireland. This it was which roused his indignation. He took some pleasure in recalling that his grandfather, Stewart, had sunk several English warships in battle.

RUNNING RISKS

Even the greatest men have their weak points, and the tragic part of it is that they do not realise the fact. Parnell was no exception, and I am sure that it never occurred to him that he had weak points and was running risks. After the Parnell Commission had concluded their inquiry he seldom came to the House of Commons. His poor health was partly responsible for this, but it was, all the same, a great mistake, and there was some tomfoolery going on in Ireland which he did not check, though he disapproved of it.

Then came a turning point in his career and the catastrophe which in one shape or another seems to overtake so many Irish leaders. He was served with a citation in the Divorce Court, at the instance of Captain O'Shea, and he made no defence, and the petition was granted as a matter of course. If this occurred nowadays it would be regarded as a mere trifling episode—for a few days the subject of jokes in more or less bad taste; but it was not so then. Divorces were rare. Queen Victoria was on the throne; a military officer, unsuccessful as a co-respondent, had to quit the Army. A member of Parliament, in like case, had to quit public life. A divorced woman was declassée for ever. At present a divorced woman may have a couple of ex-husbands present at her third wedding, and warmly congratulate their successor on his good fortune.

But an event which happened the year before greatly prejudiced Parnell's position. Sir Charles Dilke, an ex-Cabinet Minister and generally regarded as the probable successor to Gladstone as Prime Minister, got into similar trouble. In Crawford v. Crawford and Dilke, a divorce was granted, although Sir Charles defended himself strenuously against the charge, and out he went. The "Non-Conformist Conscience" was then in the ascendant, and their outcry was loud and deafening. The Non-Conformists are in England the backbone of Liberalism, their numbers run to millions, and their opinions cannot be ignored. Then there was the Liberal Alliance, and the whole affair was complicated.

A meeting at the Leinster Hall, called at first in support of the Plan of Campaign Sufferers, was diverted at the last moment into a pro-Parnell demonstration. Nothing could have been more unfortunate in Parnell's own interest, as he himself made plain later on. There followed a series of complicated movements. Parnell was re-elected chairman of the party, after some mild queries from some members. In reply to those he made a short speech—not well judged.

COMMITTEE ROOM 15

Then followed a declaration by Gladstone of his own position, and the statement that either he or Parnell, for the present, should withdraw from public life. On this issue the proceedings in Committee Room 15 turned. They dragged on for several days. There was some heat, but, on the whole, they were decorous enough. Parnell was in the chair, looking wonderfully well. Many speeches were made, but the standard of oratory was commonplace. It ended in the withdrawal of a majority of the party, as Parnell had no intention of putting a resolution from the chair which would have meant his own deposition. Had he agreed to retire for six months, all that was asked of him, he would have been leader to the hour of his death.

'Why don't you go down to Sligo and try the 'King.'" Sexton actually did go down to Sligo and did beat King Harmon.

"Parnell loved Joe Bigger. In 1874, when I was on the Northern Whig, and Gladstone dissolved Parliament with no more notice than a letter in the Daily News, I got the brief telegram, and I published it. As I was going home that morning I met Bigger, and when I told him of the dissolution he grabbed out his watch and made a dash for the station to catch the train to Cavan.

"I was in Holyhead when I heard a man say: 'That will be sad news for Ireland,' and I discovered then that private telegrams were going through to relatives in Ireland announcing the death of Parnell. It occurred to me to 'wire' the office, but I thought it would be superfluous. Next day when I opened my paper there was not a line about his death. Parnell's passing was not released for publication until the day after his death.

"I will never forget the sights when they brought him over and laid him in state in the City Hall. The crowds were immense, and the rain simply was terrible. His funeral was tremendous; every trade banner that ever was invented was there, and you can imagine the show they could put up with them."

PARNELL'S FRIENDS

SOME RECOLLECTIONS

By A Reporter.

"He was a most modest and diffident author when he first came up to me in the Irish Times to give a little publicity to the pamphlet he had written on the land question."

"Do I remember Parnell?" challenged a colleague, almost indignantly, when I asked him if he could recall the former Irish leader. "I could not forget him. He was a handsome, always perfectly groomed, man. A little proudish, cynical, yes; but everyone who knew him made allowance for that. It was his upbringing. After all, you must remember that Parnell was an Oxford University man, and not all the people he had to associate with were up to his standards. Parnell loved birds. Avondale was full of them. His friend, Pat Egan, used to go down to Wicklow every Saturday night and spend Sunday with him, and I don't think he ever came back without a linnet or other kind of song-bird for friends in Dublin.

THE "UNCROWNED KING"

"I remember him well when he used to preside at the meetings of the Land League Committee in Abbey street. I went there several times in '79 to attend his meetings, and the Irish Times used to be the only paper represented there, the others being so much opposed to him that they would not send a man. In fact, I had a copy of the resolution which signified the founding the Land League; it was written by Michael Davitt, with his left hand.

"They used to refer to Parnell as 'the uncrowned King of Ireland,' and they had a membership card for the Land League which was half green, half orange. Parnell was by no means an orator. I don't believe he ever spoke more than half-a-column, and those were the days when political leaders were reported verbatim. Half-a-column to two-thirds was his limit, and, as he spoke slowly, he might occupy fifteen minutes. So far as the people were concerned, his sympathy with the tenantry won him support everywhere; I do not think he ever had a bad meeting, or any opposition.

"Those meetings in the City Hall were unforgettable. It used to be a great sight to see McMurrough-Kavanagh, the limbless champion of the landlords, carried into the meeting on the back of a servant and dumped on the floor, off which he bounced into a seat.

"I often saw Parnell in connection with the 1880 election. Sexton was a man he was afraid of. There was a man called Black, who, I think, was Governor of Newfoundland, who wanted to contest Waterford at that time; but they wanted to divide that constituency between the Parnellite and the Conservative. Sexton thought he might have a crack at it, but when he went to Morrison's Hotel, where they were selecting the candidates, the whole thing was parcelled up, and Parnell, rather sneeringly, said to him:

CAPTAIN HARRISON IN BELFAST COUP

AN INCIDENT OF THE PARNELLITE "SPLIT"

By a Special Correspondent.

IN the week that Punch published a full page Harry Furniss cartoon showing a Parnellite versus anti-Parnellite indoor shindy, one of the more notable—though in retrospect amusing—affairs of this kind took place in the Nationalist headquarters in Belfast. The Parnellite hero of the Belfast affray was young Henry Harrison, now Captain Harrison.

At that time he was in his very early twenties, just a year or two down from Cambridge, and barely entered on his political career. He was described at the time in a Belfast paper as being a tall, handsome youth, clean-shaven and erect and remarkably cool and self-possessed. He also spoke with what, to a Belfast reporter's ear, sounded a "strong English accent."

The Belfast to which he paid his whirlwind visit in March, 1891, just a few months after "the split" was alone among the large cities of Ireland in that a large majority of the Nationalists had taken the anti-Parnellite side.

The Bishop and Tom Sexton, then member for West Belfast, had given a strong lead in the matter, which had been followed by the members of the clergy, professional and merchant classes, who controlled the city's National League branch. The opposition formed themselves into a Parnell Leadership Committee, of which Robert Johnston, the old Fenian Head Centre and member of the Supreme Council of the I.R.B., was President, and Daniel McCullough, father of Denis McCullough, now a well-known Dublin business man, was Treasurer.

This was the situation to which young Harrison was despatched from headquarters in Dublin. It was hoped that he might achieve more by his youthful audacity than an older head would achieve by political guile. He came on to Belfast from a big Parnellite meeting in Navan on the first Sunday in March, and on the train probably made his plans with Robert Johnston, who also had attended the Navan meeting.

HOTEL CONFERENCE

They arrived in Belfast, and went straight to the Prince of Wales Hotel, where they conferred with a few local Parnellites. The upshot of the conference was that at a very late hour a messenger was sent to the house of the Secretary of the National League, who, though an anti-Parnellite and responsible to an anti-Parnellite committee, was probably known to be anything but a man of iron. The secretary was roused out of his bed at midnight, and bid come to the Prince of Wales Hotel the next morning at 8 o'clock.

When he came the next morning, as commanded, Mr. Harrison demanded the keys of the National League offices, which were situated above a shop in Mill street, near the centre of the city, and also the books and records of the branch. Whether it was that the secretary was intimidated by the "strong English accent" and the "cool, self-possessed manner," or merely dominated by the stronger personality of the visitor, the result was that he handed over the keys, including the keys of the safe.

JOE DEVLIN

For the next night a meeting of the National League branch had been called to be held in the largest of the rooms of the Mill street offices. From various newspaper reports we can reconstruct the scene. The large room is packed to the doors, and the attendance overflows on to the stairs. It is composed chiefly of the solid Catholic merchants of the town, with publicans predominating. In the chair is Father O'Connor, administrator of the central city parish and spokesman of Bishop McAllister in political matters. Close at his hand is young Joe Devlin, then barely twenty, but a prominent member of the committee and a strong anti-Parnellite. Young Harrison is somewhere in the forefront, and suspicious looks are cast at him by the committee members present.

Father O'Connor opens the proceedings by asking the secretary to read the minutes of the last meeting. There is an uncomfortable silence, and then the unhappy secretary, with empty hands, falters out that he cannot read the minute book, that the minute book and every record in the safe had disappeared and that he had lent the keys that morning to Mr. Harrison thinking that it would be no harm.

The small group of Parnellites wedged near the door look at each other and smile. The Committee members look wrathfully at the secretary and then with hostility at the triumphant Harrison. The chairman, in a sharp tone, asks non-members of the branch to withdraw. Young Harrison stands up, and, in his "cool and self-possessed manner" and urbane English accent, tersely announces that he is now dissolving the branch and that the term of office of its Committee is ended.

Before he has finished some of his friends throw open the doors and a crowd of his supporters, drawn from the tough labourers of the Falls road, force their way in, pressing through the already tightly packed audience. The members of the branch exclaim in rage. Shouts of order are ignored. Members rise to speak, only to hear themselves drowned in cheers for Parnell. Some of the stouter Committeemen call for counter-cheers for Sexton. Some of the more timid make for the door. The "rushing, crushing, yelling and shouting," at this stage, according to one local paper, was indescribable, and in the melée blows were exchanged.

POLICE ARRIVE

With the uproar at its height a second and more stalwart and more disciplined body of invaders begin to press up the stairs and into the room. They are the Royal Irish Constabulary, and it will be a subject for heated recrimination for weeks afterwards as to who invited them. They are under District Inspector Barniville, father of the now well-known Dublin doctor, Surgeon Barniville. They fight their way to strategical positions, and slowly the room is cleared and the uproar subsides.

The gas is turned off, and Father O'Connor, Joe Devlin and the committee withdraw to a smaller room, where they try to work off their not quite speechless indignation in several resolutions of protest. Mr. Harrison and his followers make their way out, and down across Castle Junction to the Prince of Wales Hotel, where they elect themselves to the principal offices of the National League's Belfast branch, positions more or less conceded to them, when a week or so later Father O'Connor's party form themselves into the National Federation.

In retrospect, perhaps, the most amusing feature of it all was the brief paragraph which reported the excited scenes in the still Parnellite Freemen's Journal of the next day. In a brief, dignified paragraph worthy of the Court Circular, it announced that Mr. Henry Harrison had attended a meeting of the National League in Belfast, and carried out a "reconstruction of the branch."

ANNIVERSARY ARRANGEMENTS

DUBLIN'S VARIED PROGRAMME

An Taoiseach, Mr. de Valera, will lay a wreath on the grave of Parnell in Glasnevin Cemetery at 12.30 p.m. to-day.

The ceremony will be the opening of a series of events in Dublin's Parnell Week. Yesterday the statue in O'Connell street was decorated with shrubs and evergreens, and a laurel wreath was laid at the foot of it. One of the outstanding features of the city's tribute will be an exhibition embracing a great collection of items connected with Parnell and his activities. This will be held in the National Museum and the Municipal Art Gallery during the week. All the exhibits in the National Art Gallery relating to Parnell are being transferred to the National Museum, following a decision of the Board, among them the famous portrait of Parnell by Sydney P. Hall and the seven frames of Sydney P. Hall's drawings of the Parnell Commission. The Committee organising the anniversary display appealed for Parnelliana, and as a result many items hitherto unseen by the public have been sent from all parts of the country to the National Museum.

The Irish Tourist Association in O'Connell street will have a special window display of pictures of Parnell and Wicklow, and the management of the Theatre Royal will produce a programme dedicated to the memory of Parnell, and the "Chief" will be the subject of daily talks on the wireless.

CAPTAIN HARRISON TO LECTURE

Captain Henry Harrison, the sole survivor of "Committee Room 15," will fly specially from England to deliver a lecture in the Gresham Hotel. Captain Harrison was one of the 29 members of the Irish Nationalist Party who stood by Parnell in that tragic phase of his career. The Lord Mayor of Dublin, Alderman P. S. Doyle, who was a member of the Memorial Committee established two years ago, but since disbanded, will preside at the lecture, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Mansion House Fuel Fund. There will be a supporting musical programme. An invitation has been extended to the No. 1 Army Band to give a recital at the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, and a series of anniversary ceilidhthe will be held in different parts of the city.

NATIONAL PROCESSION

The events associated with the anniversary will conclude next Sunday with a national procession from St. Stephen's Green to the Parnell Monument. It will include a number of bands and contingents from provincial centres, and will be headed by a coach drawn by two white horses and conveying the Lord Mayor and Captain Harrison. Speeches in Irish and English will be given by Senator C. M. Byrne and Giolla Criost O'Brion. Mr. P. McNamee, President of the G.A.A., will preside, and the attendance on the platform will include Mr. James North, veteran Fenian, who took part in the Tallaght Rising. The Fenian hymn, "God Save Ireland," will be sung before the parade goes on to Glasnevin, where further ceremonies will take place. The Irish National Foresters will turn out in full uniform.

Contingents from the six counties will be sent by the National Club, Belfast, and the Ulster Union Club, and permission has been granted to members of the L.D.F. to parade in uniform. A Parnell Anniversary Ceilidhe will take place in the Mansion House next Sunday night, where Captain Harrison will conclude the week's ceremonies with a message to the New Ireland.

WEDDINGS

MR. J. J. McCONNELL AND MISS J. T. WARWICK

The wedding of Mr John J. McConnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. McConnell, 82 Leinster road, Rathmines, and Miss Joan Townley Warwick, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Warwick, 20 Upper Baggot street, Dublin, took place on Saturday last

NO IMMEDIATE ELECTION

ASKED TO RE-VALUE GALWAY

From Our Correspondent.

GALWAY, Sunday.

Mr. Sean Moylan, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Defence, assured a Fianna Fail conference at Galway to-day that there was no possibility of an early general election. There would be no general election, he said, while the present emergency lasted. He appealed to clubs to be ready to organise when the emergency had passed.

Mr. Moylan agreed to ask the Department of Agriculture to develop the use of seaweed and Co. Clare phosphate deposits as much as possible.

The conference called for the revaluation of Galway City, and stated that the present rate was most inequitable as between new houses and old ones. The Department of Agriculture was asked to try and find some means for granting Galway port its share of the licences for the export of fat cattle.

OBITUARY

MR. PATRICK BOURKE

The death occurred on Saturday last, at his residence, Denmark street, Limerick, of Mr. Patrick Bourke, aged 81. He had been a member of the Limerick Corporation for over forty years. Throughout his life he took an active part in Irish National politics and was closely associated with the Sinn Fein movement. He was chairman of the City Executive of Fine Gael, and up to the passing of the City Management Act was chairman of the City Board of Health. Mr. Bourke was an ardent advocate of reform in mental hospitals, and in late years was responsible for organising sports, entertainments and excursions for the patients in the Limerick institution. He represented the Corporation at the Congress of the Municipal Authorities held last month.

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE

RELAXATION OF RESTRICTIONS

After a fortnight of freedom from foot-and-mouth disease in all districts, the Minister for Agriculture has removed the remaining restrictions on the general movement of animals in a number of areas.

Details will be found in an official advertisement on page 4.

BANK CHARGES

The Council of the Irish Seed and Nursery Trades' Association have passed a resolution protesting against the proposed increases in bank charges. The resolution states that the proposed increase would force upon the business community yet another increase in overhead expenses which cannot be recouped.

PAPAL HONOUR FOR IRISH PRIEST

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

without Calomel—and you'll jump out of bed in the morning full of vim and vigour

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk, and the world looks punk.

Laxatives help a little, but a mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carters Brand Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carters Brand Little Liver Pills. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 1/3 and 3/-

RED CROSS FIELD EXERCISES

Field exercises of the South County Dublin Brigade of the Irish Red Cross Society took place, by kind permission of Messrs. Evans, in the grounds of Monkstown Park School, Monkstown, yesterday afternoon.

From the grassy slopes on either side of a natural amphitheatre spectators watched a very commendable display of drilling by the units engaged. Afterwards there was a parade and march past a saluting base, on which were senior officers of the Society. Following the march past there were inter-divisional competitions in first-aid, the "cases" being Boy Scouts.

The divisions represented in the turnout were: Blackrock, Dun Laoghaire, Dalkey and Cabinteely.

The parade was inspected by Mr. R. Henderson, County Director; Dr. Bouchier Hayes, County Medical Officer, and Mr. J. P. MacNamara, Chief A.R.P. Officer. In charge of the parade were the Ard Cheannasai (Mr. J. M. Devitt); Brigadier-Adjutant, Mr. R. Chambers; Brigadier Medical Officers: Dr. J. P. Sheehan, Dr. O'Rourke, Dr. McCarthy and Dr. Roantree.

Drogheda Pilgrimage.—A pilgrimage of over two thousand from Dundalk, led by the Rev. H. Murray, S.T.L., visited the Shrine of Blessed Oliver Plunket in St. Peter's, Drogheda. At the church the pilgrims were received by the Right Rev. Monsignor O'Callaghan, P.P., V.G., and the Rev. T. P. Conlon, C.C.

Golf Newspaper Press Fund Competition

One hundred and sixty competed in fourballs at the Hermitage Club yesterday in aid of the Newspaper Press Fund. The courses played to its full length, and the return of 9 up by S. Cullen and the Hon. Treasurer of the Club, P. C. Moore, for the pictures presented by Mr. William Conor, R.O.I., and Mr. J. Humbert Craig, R.H.A., was a very excellent score, indeed. The winners were:—1st (presented by Messrs. J. H. Craig and Wm. Conor)—S. Cullen (Grange), 10, and P. C. Moore (Hermitage), 16, 9 up; second (presented by Mr. R. F. Browne and Hermitage Club), J. P. Kennedy (Hermitage) 6, and G. Begg (Hermitage) 14, 7 up; third (presented by Messrs. W. G. Fitzsimmons and R. Lyon and Mr. P. J. Hickey), J. P. Byrne (Hermitage), 4, and T. P. Early (Portmarnock), 12, 6 up (won on second nine); B. K. O'Reilly (Grange), 6, and D. Dentol (Grange), 12, 6 up; R. S. Morrison (Lucan), 12, and P. A. Curran (Ldcan), 16, 6 up. Putting—Men—A. W. Briscoe, 15. Ladies—Mrs. O'Sullivan (won on a cut); Mrs. J. Robbins and Mrs. Flanagan tied with 18.

The last of the open fourballs for the Fund will be held next Sunday at Elm Park.

LONDON MONEY MARKET

Treasury borrowing against deposit receipts continues at a high level, the banks having been asked again to advance £70,000,000 this week. Maturities will again be nominally £40,000,000, so that the new money will be £30,000,000 plus receipts which have been cashed in order to buy War Bonds. The chief reason for the present large call is the payment due to-day (Monday) for requisitioned Canadian sterling securities.

Turnover in bills has been reduced during the past few days, partly because of the banks' heavy transfers to the Treasury, while the market's ability to sell short-dated maturities has been limited, because on some days there were no Treasury Bills to take up.

Business was more active than usual on a Saturday as the discount houses had to pay for new bills, against which some forward sales were arranged on Friday. Money was in ample supply, with non-clearing lenders offering balances until to-day at ½ per cent. against bonds.

MANCHESTER MARKETS

CHEERING FOOD NEWS

Trading conditions in all sections of the Manchester Provision market continue on satisfactory lines, with available supplies of all commodities moving steadily into consumption.

Some cheering food news comes from an authoritative source, to the effect that domestic fat ration will be increased by 25 per cent., or 8 ozs. to 10 ozs., from November 17th. This does not mean that the butter ration will be changed from 2 ozs. at present, but that the total fats ration will be made up by margarine and cooking fats to 10 ozs.

The cheese ration has already been increased, and among other commodities they hoped to be in a position to make available increased supplies of bacon, hams, cooking fats and processed eggs. The domestic sugar ration will be increased by 50 per cent., or from 8 ozs. to 12 ozs., owing to a larger output from South America. It is estimated that over 12,000,000 meals a day are being served outside the home and "off" the ration.

Two eggs per ration book are being allocated for October. This week's supply of English eggs is slightly lower than a fortnight ago. Last week 33.8 million eggs were distributed. It is expected that there will be a small allotment of Eireann in this week's distribution.

Demand for game is good, but supplies coming into the market are only moderate, and quickly snapped up. Pheasants quoted 6/- to 12/-, partridge 4/- to 8/-, grouse 4/- to 10/6 brace.

Dead poultry are very restricted, and insufficient for the demand, at 1/7 lb. for best fowls, chickens and ducks. Mountain hares 3/6, brown 7/- each, rabbits 9½d. lb. (all wholesale).

MINISTER MAY ORDER SALES

An advertisement in our columns to-day announces that the Minister for Supplies has made an Order taking very comprehensive powers for the distribution of commodities. The Order empowers the Minister to direct the sale of goods held by a person to another specified person. The purchaser may further be directed to use the goods in a particular manner or for a specified purpose. The Order will enable the Minister to see that the most equitable distribution of any particular commodity will be secured and thus prevent "cornering."

Two Flying Officers of the Royal New Zealand Air Force were drowned yesterday, when an aircraft crashed in Nandi Bay, on the island of Viti Levu, 60 miles west of the Fiji Island of Suva.—(Reuter.)

STOCK EXCHANGE FEATURES

A MORE FAVOURABLE ATMOSPHERE

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE firm tendency produced in the London Stock markets by the Prime Minister's encouraging review of the war was helped towards the end of last week by the swift decisions of the Moscow Three-Power Conference and the partial disclosure of the measures proposed to increase Russia's resistance to the German attack.

The more favourable atmosphere produced encouraged some increase of buying, and prices quickly responded owing to the small market supply of stock. Current prices of Gilt-edged securities are very little below the highest of the year, and they mark a big recovery from the opening level, while, compared with the quotations touched in the summer of 1940, the upward movement has been really remarkable.

ARE RAILS UNDER-VALUED?

Last week's rally in prices was not confined to the Gilt-edged section. Home Rails came into some demand, though the details published of the new agreement between the companies and the Government still leave the position somewhat obscure, and it is not certain that the annual rental of £43,000,000 will be actually a net figure. If it were, some stocks, such as Great Western Ord., Southern Pref'd. Ord., L.M.S. 4 p.c. 1923 Preference, and L.N.E. 1st Preference would be considered distinctly undervalued at their present prices.

The statement that control of the railways will continue for a minimum period of one year after the cessation of hostilities may be considered a "bull" point on the assumption that the sum received by the companies, less provision for any war damage, is sufficient to repeat the dividends paid for 1940.

Some improvement in Guaranteed and Debenture stocks towards the end of last week was attributed to purchases by holders of the requisitioned Canadian securities.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Reference has been made on a previous occasion to the favourable traffic position of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The improvement in receipts continues, despite the warning of the President at the annual meeting that traffics would probably fall off towards the end of the year.

The company has now completed nine months of 1941, and for that period the net receipts show an increase of nearly $9,000,000. For September only, the gain in the gross earnings was $1,476,627, and despite larger working expenses net receipts showed an expansion of $382,408. It can be said that a dividend is now being earned on the Common shares, which have received nothing for nine years, and so promising is the position that the market would not be surprised if the directors declared an interim payment without waiting for the full results of the year.

This possibility greatly strengthens the position of the 4 p.c. Preference. Yet, this stock is still obtainable at about 61½ to yield 6½ p.c. The $25 Common shares last week rose to $11⅞, and it would not be surprising to see a considerably higher level for these before the year is out.

THE RISE IN OILS

In the more speculative markets the chief feature of late has been the improvement in certain Oil shares. Anglo-Iranian Ord. was strengthened by the more favourable position secured in the Middle East by the Allies, and Burmahs rose in sympathy and also because the interim dividend was maintained at 5 per cent. The improvement may lead to a demand for Shell Transport.

Among the low-price shares, Mexican and Canadian Eagles were marked up sharply on the report that the American Oil Companies have received from the State Department a specific proposal for a preliminary statement of the Mexican expropriation question, while activity in these issues was also stimulated by the rumour of the resumption of diplomatic relations with Britain. Business in these two shares became quite active last week.

Another feature was a jump in Ultramar, which has interests in Venezuela. Whether Oil shares should be bought now is a moot point, for so much must necessarily depend upon the course of the war. Those with confidence as to the ultimate result of the conflict might decide that Shell Transport Ord is as good a purchase as any in this group, partly because of the world-wide ramifications of the company and partly because of the strength of the finances.

WALL STREET STEADY

NO SPECULATIVE ENTHUSIASM

NEW YORK, Saturday.

The Stock Market vacillated very narrowly, and variations were generally slight and about evenly divided.

Rails were the exception, and very light support was accorded in view of the steadily mounting earnings and hope of a favourable wage settlement.

The turnover totalled 210,000 shares, and of the 530 stocks traded 225 were higher, 140 were lower, and 165 were unchanged.

In spite of the absence of speculative enthusiasm, it is evident that resistance at the current low levels is itself a source of some satisfaction.

The market closed steady.

Film Notes

A Marriage Made in Hollywood

By Our Cinema Correspondent

ALTHOUGH William Powell and Myrna Loy must be what is known as "getting on," they are still far and away the best married couple on the screen. Their latest film, Love Crazy, which is being shown at the Savoy this week, inclines more to the slapstick than the sophisticated line of comedy, but it is as funny as ever.

They have been happily married for four years, and are just about to begin the anniversary celebrations when trouble comes along in the persons of Myrna Loy's mother (Florence Bates) and William Powell's former girl friend (Gail Patrick). Divorce proceedings ensue, and William Powell, in order to postpone the unhappy day, pretends to be insane so convincingly that he is put in an asylum. When next he meets his beloved wife, he has escaped from the asylum and is posing as his own sister: Charley's Aunt stuff, but he does it very well.

What I like about this team is the fact that Myrna Loy never tries to look sweet sixteen, and William Powell never tries to knock down every man who comes between him and his attractive wife.

In short, they behave as if they were human beings instead of just film stars.

Carlton

There is a strange, sinister darkness brooding over San Francisco Docks in the film of that name, and one feels all the time that anything might happen, which, as a matter of fact, it does.

Burgess Meredith, the young actor who gave such fine performances in "Winterset," "That Uncertain Feeling" and "Idiot's Delight," adds another triumph to the list in the part of a dock boy, convicted of murdering a man who is still alive. There are thrills in plenty of the most fast-moving type, and, as well as Irene Hervey, Esther Ralston and Robert Armstrong, the cast includes that grand old Abbey actor, Barry Fitzgerald, who, incidentally, gives us one of the finest pieces of character acting I have seen for a long time.

Also on the programme is Lucky Devils, a film about two newsreel camera men, who would fake anything from a murder to an earthquake, but bring back the pictures as often as not before the incident has occurred. I do not think much of Richard Arlen and Andy Devine films as a rule, but "Lucky Devils" prove an exception.

Royal

A lot of water has passed under O'Connell Bridge since Deanna Durbin made 100 Men and a Girl, and she has never made anything nearly as good since: but, perhaps, that is because Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra have not appeared with her since.

Starring Mischa Auer and Adolphe Menjou, as well as Deanna Durbin, there is not much in the film besides music, but when that is provided by the aforementioned Mr. Stokowski, who wants anything else?

Metropole

The publicity blurbs for The Gay City point out in no uncertain terms that this film is "a scorcher" and "a sizzler." I do not know precisely what these expansive terms signify, but if they mean that the picture is full of noisy music from Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra, and crazy wise-cracks from Bert Wheeler, that is just about the size of it.

It is an amusing piece of tomfoolery, telling what happened when Bert Wheeler, Virginia Dale, Lillian Cornell and Constance Moore arrived in Las Vegas—the gay city of the title—to collect an inheritance. Constance Moore went gambling, and won Phil Regan and 15,000 dollars; Bert Wheeler went gambling and lost the 15,000 dollars. Then they all went to work for Tommy Dorsey and the band.

If you like modern dance music, served à la American and modern humour served ditto, you should enjoy this film.

Corinthian

Dead Men Tell is another of those exciting Charlie Chan films, this time involving a search for hidden treasure. The map which denotes the location of the treasure has been divided into four parts, distributed among four members of the expedition. When two members of the expedition are found murdered Charlie Chan realises that the murderer must now have three parts, and he lets all the suspects know that he possesses the fourth part, in an endeavour to trap him, which, of course, he does in a highly thrilling climax. The cast includes Sidney Toller, Sheila Ryan and Robert Eldon.

Also on the programme is "Ridin' on a Rainbow, starring Gene Autry, which ought to be sufficient to recommend it—or otherwise.

A Woman's Face (Capitol). Retained. The story of a woman whose life was almost ruined by a scar on her face. Starring Joan Crawford, Conrad Veidt and Melvyn Douglas, this, as I said before, is a picture you must not miss.

* * *

Andy Hardy's Private Secretary (Adelphi). Also retained. Even if, like myself, you are getting a little tired of Andy Hardy films, you should go to the Adelphi this week just to see his secretary (Kathryn Grayson), a lovely newcomer with a lovely voice.

* * *

Moon Over Burma (Regal Rooms). Dorothy Lamour forsakes Bing Crosby and Bob Hope to venture into the jungle with Preston Foster and Robert Preston, but it all adds up to the same thing—an entertaining picture.

* * *

Beyond To-morrow (Astor). Retained. A glimpse of the Great By and By through the eyes of C. Aubrey Smith, Charles Winniger and others. Unusual, but decidedly interesting.

* * *

Rookies (Grafton). Bud Abbott, Lou Costello and the Andrews Sisters in an amusing propaganda film about the United States Army. But do not misunderstand me; there is more humour than propaganda about it.

* * *

The Testament of Dr. Mabuse (Green). The most thrilling thriller for a long time. In German, by the way, but that does not detract from the thrills.

* * *

Men of Boys' Town (Pavilion). Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney in the sequel to "Boys' Town." A little tearful, but highly entertaining.

* * *

Kitty Foyle (Regent). See Ginger Rogers earning for herself an Academy Award. She acts a little bit, too. From Thursday Bette Davis—another exponent of "high-class" acting—and Herbert Marshall in "The Letter."

* * *

One Million B.C. (Theatre De Luxe). Victor Mature and Carole Landis look back to the days of pterodactyls, daguerrotypes and what not. From Thursday, Gordon Harker and Sydney Howard in "Once a Crook." Also "Murder Among Friends," with Marjorie Weaver and John Hubbard.

* * *

The Ape (Astoria). Boris Karloff gets to work again, this time disguised as an ape. Also "That Gang of Mine," with the East Side Kids. From Thursday, Gordon Jones and Joyce Compton in "I Take This Oath," also "Tomboy."

IRISH NEWS IN BRIEF

Cinema Workers' Wages.—Dublin theatre and cinema workers have accepted offers of increases in wages, to be paid retrospectively from June. A further conference will be necessary before agreement can be reached.

* * *

Clonmel Gas Supply.—At a meeting of the Clonmel Gas Company the manager reported that the coal supply would allow gas-making to continue for not more than fifteen days. If the gas works close, about two dozen men will be disemployed.

* * *

Mallow Beet Factory.—It is believed that sugar-making will begin at the Mallow factory on 20th October. In all, 17,200 acres of beet are being grown in the area, and the crop will probably average about 10½ tons to the acre.

RED CROSS FIELD EXERCISES

Field exercises of the South County Dublin Brigade of the Irish Red Cross Society took place, by kind permission of Messrs. Evans, in the grounds of Monkstown Park School, Monkstown, yesterday afternoon.

From the grassy slopes on either side of a natural amphitheatre spectators watched a very commendable display of drilling by the units engaged. Afterwards there was a parade and march past a saluting base, on which were senior officers of the Society. Following the march past there were inter-divisional competitions in first-aid, the "cases" being Boy Scouts.

The divisions represented in the turn-out were: Blackrock, Dun Laoghaire, Dalkey and Cabinteely.

The parade was inspected by Mr. R. Henderson, County Director; Dr. Bouchier Hayes, County Medical Officer, and Mr. J. P. MacNamara, Chief A.R.P. Officer. In charge of the parade were the Ard Cheannasai (Mr. J. M. Devitt); Brigadier-Adjutant, Mr. R. Chambers; Brigadier Medical Officers: Dr. J. P. Sheehan, Dr. O'Rourke, Dr. McCarthy and Dr. Roantree.

Dregheda Pilgrimage.—A pilgrimage of over two thousand from Dundalk, led by the Rev. H. Murray, S.T.L., visited the Shrine of Blessed Oliver Plunket in St. Peter's, Drogheda. At the church the pilgrims were received by the Right Rev. Monsignor O'Callaghan, P.P., V.G., and the Rev. T. P. Conlon, C.C.

Newspaper Press Fund Competition

One hundred and sixty competed in fourballs at the Hermitage Club yesterday in aid of the Newspaper Press Fund. The courses played to its full length, and the return of 9 up by S. Cullen and the Hon. Treasurer of the Club, P. C. Moore, for the pictures presented by Mr. William Conor, R.O.I., and Mr. J. Humbert Craig, R.H.A., was a very excellent score, indeed. The winners were:—1st (presented by Messrs. J. H. Craig and Wm. Conor)—S. Cullen (Grange), 10, and P. C. Moore (Hermitage), 16, 9 up; second (presented by Mr. R. F. Browne and Hermitage Club), J. P. Kennedy (Hermitage) 6, and G. Begg (Hermitage) 14, 7 up; third (presented by Messrs. W. G. Fitzsimmons and R. Lyon and Mr. P. J. Hickey), J. P. Byrne (Hermitage), 4, and T. P. Early (Portmarnock), 12, 6 up (won on second nine); B. K. O'Reilly (Grange), 6, and D. Denton (Grange), 12, 6 up; R. S. Morrison (Lucan), 12, and P. A. Curran (Ldcan)., 16, 6 up. Putting—Men—A. W. Briscoe, 15. Ladies—Mrs. O'Sullivan (won on a cut); Mrs. J. Robbins and Mrs. Flanagan tied with 18.

The last of the open fourballs for the Fund will be held next Sunday at Elm Park.

STOCK EXCHANGE FEATURES
A MORE FAVOURABLE ATMOSPHERE

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE firm tendency produced in the London Stock markets by the Prime Minister's encouraging review of the war was helped towards the end of last week by the swift decisions of the Moscow Three-Power Conference and the partial disclosure of the measures proposed to increase Russia's resistance to the German attack.

The more favourable atmosphere produced encouraged some increase of buying, and prices quickly responded owing to the small market supply of stock. Current prices of Gilt-edged securities are very little below the highest of the year, and they mark a big recovery from the opening level, while, compared with the quotations touched in the summer of 1940, the upward movement has been really remarkable.

ARE RAILS UNDER-VALUED?

Last week's rally in prices was not confined to the Gilt-edged section. Home Rails came into some demand, though the details published of the new agreement between the companies and the Government still leave the position somewhat obscure, and it is not certain that the annual rental of £43,000,000 will be actually a net figure. If it were, some stocks, such as Great Western Ord., Southern Prefd. Ord., L.M.S. 4 p.c., 1923 Preference, and L.N.E. 1st Preference would be considered distinctly undervalued at their present prices.

The statement that control of the railways will continue for a minimum period of one year after the cessation of hostilities may be considered a "bull" point on the assumption that the sum received by the companies, less provision for any war damage, is sufficient to repeat the dividends paid for 1940.

Some improvement in Guaranteed and Debenture stocks towards the end of last week was attributed to purchases by holders of the requisitioned Canadian securities.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Reference has been made on a previous occasion to the favourable traffic position of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The improvement in receipts continues, despite the warning of the President at the annual meeting that traffics would probably fall off towards the end of the year.

The company has now completed nine months of 1941, and for that period the net receipts show an increase of nearly $9,000,000. For September only, the gain in the gross earnings was $1,476,627, and despite larger working expenses net receipts showed an expansion of $382,408. It can be said that a dividend is now being earned on the Common shares, which have received nothing for nine years, and so promising is the position that the market would not be surprised if the directors declared an interim payment without waiting for the full results of the year.

This possibility greatly strengthens the position of the 4 p.c. Preference. Yet this stock is still obtainable at about 61½ to yield 6½ p.c. The $25 Common shares last week rose to $11½, and it would not be surprising to see a considerably higher level for these before the year is out.

THE RISE IN OILS

In the more speculative markets the chief feature of late has been the improvement in certain Oil shares. Anglo-Iranian Ord. was strengthened by the more favourable position secured in the Middle East by the Allies, and Burmahs rose in sympathy and also because the interim dividend was maintained at 5 per cent. The improvement may lead to a demand for Shell Transport.

Among the low-price shares, Mexican and Canadian Eagles were marked up sharply on the report that the American Oil Companies have received from the State Department a specific proposal for a preliminary statement of the Mexican expropriation question, while activity in these issues was also stimulated by the rumour of the resumption of diplomatic relations with Britain. Business in these two shares became quite active last week.

Another feature was a jump in Ultramar, which has interests in Venezuela. Whether Oil shares should be bought now is a moot point, for so much must necessarily depend upon the course of the war. Those with confidence as to the ultimate result of the conflict might decide that Shell Transport Ord. is as good a purchase as any in this group, partly because of the world-wide ramifications of the company and partly because of the strength of the finances.

COMPANY NEWS

Associated British Picture Corp.—Trading profits £1,427,157 (against £1,421,157). Net profit £192,597 (against £213,121). No Ord. dividend. The last payment made was 20 p.c. in 1935.

A. C. Cesser.—Net trading profit up from £136,027 to £157,730. Dividend on the Ord Shares again 15 p.c.

Cornercroft.—Final 9 p.c., making 15 p.c., (same).

Debenhams.—Profits £627,244 (against £676,702). No dividend on the Ord. (against 8 1-3 p.c.).

Jeram Rubber Estates.—Trading profit £35,482 (against £22,325). Dividend 7½ p.c. (against 6½ p.c.).

Steel Barrel Scammells and Associated Engineers.—Final of 9 p.c., making 15 p.c. for the year, compared with 12½ p.c.

LONDON MONEY MARKET

Treasury borrowing against deposit receipts continues at a high level, the banks having been asked again to advance £70,000,000 this week. Maturities will again be nominally £40,000,000, so that the new money will be £30,000,000 plus receipts which have been cashed in order to buy War Bonds. The chief reason for the present large call is the payment due to-day (Monday) for requisitioned Canadian sterling securities.

Turnover in bills has been reduced during the past few days, partly because of the banks' heavy transfers to the Treasury, while the market's ability to sell short-dated maturities has been limited, because on some days there were no Treasury Bills to take up.

Business was more active than usual on a Saturday, as the discount houses had to pay for new bills, against which some forward sales were arranged on Friday. Money was in ample supply, with non-clearing lenders offering balances until to-day at ½ per cent. against bonds.

MANCHESTER MARKETS
CHEERING FOOD NEWS

Trading conditions in all sections of the Manchester Provision market continue on satisfactory lines, with available supplies of all commodities moving steadily into consumption.

Some cheering food news comes from an authoritative source, to the effect that domestic fat ration will be increased by 25 per cent., or 8 ozs. to 10 ozs., from November 17th. This does not mean that the butter ration will be changed from 2 ozs. at present, but that the total fats ration will be made up by margarine and cooking fats to 10 ozs.

The cheese ration has already been increased, and among other commodities they hoped to be in a position to make available increased supplies of bacon, hams, cooking fats and processed eggs. The domestic sugar ration will be increased by 50 per cent., or from 8 ozs. to 12 ozs., owing to a larger output from South America. It is estimated that over 12,000,000 meals a day are being served outside the home and "off" the ration.

Two eggs per ration book are being allocated for October. This week's supply of English eggs is slightly lower than a fortnight ago. Last week 33.8 million eggs were distributed. It is expected that there will be a small allotment of Eireann in this week's distribution.

Demand for game is good, but supplies coming into the market are only moderate, and quickly snapped up. Pheasants quoted 6/- to 12/-, partridge 4/- to 8/-, grouse 4/- to 10/6 brace.

Dead poultry are very restricted, and insufficient for the demand, at 1/7 lb. for best fowls, chickens and ducks. Mountain hares 3/6, brown 7/- each, rabbits 8½d. lb. (all wholesale).

MINISTER MAY ORDER SALES

An advertisement in our columns to-day announces that the Minister for Supplies has made an Order taking very comprehensive powers for the distribution of commodities. The Order empowers the Minister to direct the sale of goods held by a person to another specified person. The purchaser may further be directed to use the goods in a particular manner or for a specified purpose. The Order will enable the Minister to see that the most equitable distribution of any particular commodity will be secured and thus prevent "cornering."

Two Flying Officers of the Royal New Zealand Air Force were drowned yesterday, when an aircraft crashed in Nandi Bay, on the island of Viti Levu, 60 miles west of the Fiji Island of Suva.—(Reuter.)

WALL STREET STEADY
NO SPECULATIVE ENTHUSIASM

NEW YORK, Saturday.

The Stock Market vacillated very narrowly, and variations were generally slight and about evenly divided.

Rails were the exception, and very light support was accorded in view of the steadily mounting earnings and hope of a favourable wage settlement.

The turnover totalled 210,000 shares, and of the 530 stocks traded 225 were higher, 140 were lower, and 165 were unchanged.

In spite of the absence of speculative enthusiasm, it is evident that resistance at the current low levels is itself a source of some satisfaction.

The market closed steady.

Film Notes
A Marriage Made in Hollywood

By Our Cinema Correspondent

ALTHOUGH William Powell and Myrna Loy must be what is known as "getting on," they are still far and away the best married couple on the screen. Their latest film, Love Crazy, which is being shown at the Savoy this week, inclines more to the slapstick than the sophisticated line of comedy, but it is as funny as ever.

They have been happily married for four years, and are just about to begin the anniversary celebrations when trouble comes along in the persons of Myrna Loy's mother (Florence Bates) and William Powell's former girl friend (Gail Patrick). Divorce proceedings ensue, and William Powell, in order to postpone the unhappy day, pretends to be insane so convincingly that he is put in an asylum. When next he meets his beloved wife, he has escaped from the asylum and is posing as his own sister: Charley's Aunt stuff, but he does it very well.

What I like about this team is the fact that Myrna Loy never tries to look sweet sixteen, and William Powell never tries to knock down every man who comes between him and his attractive wife.

In short, they behave as if they were human beings instead of just film stars.

Carlton

There is a strange, sinister darkness brooding over San Francisco Docks in the film of that name, and one feels all the time that anything might happen, which, as a matter of fact, it does.

Burgess Meredith, the young actor who gave such fine performances in "Winterset," "That Uncertain Feeling" and "Idiot's Delight," adds another triumph to the list in the part of a dock boy, convicted of murdering a man who is still alive. There are thrills in plenty of the most fast-moving type, and, as well as Irene Hervey, Esther Ralston and Robert Armstrong, the cast includes that grand old Abbey actor, Barry Fitzgerald, who, incidentally, gives us one of the finest pieces of character acting I have seen for a long time.

Also on the programme is Lucky Devils, a film about two newsreel camera men, who would fake anything from a murder to an earthquake, but bring back the pictures as often as not before the incident has occurred. I do not think much of Richard Arlen and Andy Devine films as a rule, but "Lucky Devils" prove an exception.

Royal

A lot of water has passed under O'Connell Bridge since Deanna Durbin made 100 Men and a Girl, and she has never made anything nearly as good since: but, perhaps, that is because Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra have not appeared with her since.

Starring Mischa Auer and Adolphe Menjou, as well as Deanna Durbin, there is not much in the film besides music, but when that is provided by the aforementioned Mr. Stokowski, who wants anything else?

Metropole

The publicity blurbs for The Gay City point out in no uncertain terms that this film is "a scorcher" and "a sizzler." I do not know precisely what these expansive terms signify, but if they mean that the picture is full of noisy music from Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra, and crazy wise-cracks from Bert Wheeler, that is just about the size of it.

It is an amusing piece of tomfoolery, telling what happened when Bert Wheeler, Virginia Dale, Lillian Cornell and Constance Moore arrived in Las Vegas—the gay city of the title—to collect an inheritance. Constance Moore went gambling, and won Phil Regan and 15,000 dollars; Bert Wheeler went gambling and lost the 15,000 dollars. Then they all went to work for Tommy Dorsey and the band.

If you like modern dance music, served à la American and modern humour served ditto, you should enjoy this film.

Corinthian

Dead Men Tell is another of those exciting Charlie Chan films, this time involving a search for hidden treasure. The map which denotes the location of the treasure has been divided into four parts, distributed among four members of the expedition. When two members of the expedition are found murdered Charlie Chan realises that the murderer must now have three parts, and he lets all the suspects know that he possesses the fourth part, in an endeavour to trap him, which, of course, he does in a highly thrilling climax. The cast includes Sidney Toller, Sheila Ryan and Robert Eldon.

Also on the programme is "Ridin' on a Rainbow, starring Gene Autry, which ought to be sufficient to recommend it—or otherwise.

A Woman's Face (Capitol). Retained. The story of a woman whose life was almost ruined by a scar on her face. Starring Joan Crawford, Conrad Veidt and Melvyn Douglas, this, as I said before, is a picture you must not miss.

* * *

Andy Hardy's Private Secretary (Adelphi). Also retained. Even if, like myself, you are getting a little tired of Andy Hardy films, you should go to the Adelphi this week just to see his secretary (Kathryn Grayson), a lovely newcomer with a lovely voice.

* * *

Moon Over Burma (Regal Rooms). Dorothy Lamour forsakes Bing Crosby and Bob Hope to venture into the jungle with Preston Foster and Robert Preston, but it all adds up to the same thing—an entertaining picture.

* * *

Beyond To-morrow (Astor). Retained. A glimpse of the Great By and By through the eyes of C. Aubrey Smith, Charles Winniger and others. Unusual, but decidedly interesting.

* * *

Rookies (Grafton). Bud Abbott, Lou Costello and the Andrews Sisters in an amusing propaganda film about the United States Army. But do not misunderstand me; there is more humour than propaganda about it.

* * *

The Testament of Dr. Mabuse (Green). The most thrilling thriller for a long time. In German, by the way, but that does not detract from the thrills.

* * *

Men of Boys' Town (Pavilion). Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney in the sequel to "Boys' Town." A little tearful, but highly entertaining.

* * *

Kitty Foyle (Regent). See Ginger Rogers earning for herself an Academy Award. She acts a little bit, too. From Thursday Bette Davis—another exponent of "high-class" acting—and Herbert Marshall in "The Letter."

* * *

One Million B.C. (Theatre De Luxe). Victor Mature and Carole Landis look back to the days of pterodactyls, daguerrotypes and what not. From Thursday, Gordon Harker and Sydney Howard in "Once a Crook." Also "Murder Among Friends," with Marjorie Weaver and John Hubbard.

* * *

The Ape (Astoria). Boris Karloff gets to work again, this time disguised as an ape. Also "That Gang of Mine," with the East Side Kids. From Thursday, Gordon Jones and Joyce Compton in "I Take This Oath," also "Tomboy."

IRISH NEWS IN BRIEF

Cinema Workers' Wages.—Dublin theatre and cinema workers have accepted offers of increases in wages, to be paid retrospectively from June. A further conference will be necessary before agreement can be reached.

* * *

Clonmel Gas Supply.—At a meeting of the Clonmel Gas Company the manager reported that the coal supply would allow gas-making to continue for not more than fifteen days. If the gas works close, about two dozen men will be disemployed.

* * *

Mallow Beet Factory.—It is believed that sugar-making will begin at the Mallow factory on 20th October. In all, 17,200 acres of beet are being grown in the area, and the crop will probably average about 10½ tons to the acre.

Honour of the Clan.—At Clare Circuit Court, Michael Faulkiner, Kilrush, pleaded guilty to robbery with violence. Senator P. Hogan, for the accused man, said that Faulkiner belonged to an itinerant clan, none of whom had ever been charged with anything in the nature of dishonesty. As a result of his conduct the prisoner was now ostracised by the numerous members of the clan.
